College Republicans. He said that the Democrats allow for more diversity of ideas in the party and also try to concentrate in their meetings on being practical and activists. That's why the Democratic party is bigger, Kaplan said.

Shriner disagreed, saying his organization is not as active because of the relatively low number of Republicans in North Carolina. Not as many Republicans seek office in the state.

But after the primary elections, the College Republicans will become more active in campaigns, he said.

Both the Young Democrats and the College Republicans are preparing for training schools on how to run campaigns.

Kaplan cited the Hubert H. Humphrey Training School at North Carolina A&T in Greensboro, where on Feb. 11 Democrats can learn to organize a campaign, to be a delegate to the national convention and to become more educated on the issues. Another event is the Young Democrats Spring Conference in Charlotte March 2-3.

The Republicans' state spring convention will be Feb. 25-27, and the Fieldman School, where Republicans can learn more about campaigning, will take place March 31, Shimer said. The Republicans will publish several issues of "Freedom's Defense," a newspaper with articles written by Republicans in colleges all over the state.

"The College Republicans have not been the force they should have been the last year and a half," Shimer said. "I want to build them back up."

"I remember the initial meetings where they test you out: 'What is this guy into, why is he here?'" Dougherty said. "I think they have a fair way of judging. I thought they were very open-minded to every kind of activity. They were very enthusiastic. It just seemed like they needed that kind of an outlet."

The youth at Dillon School are adolescent boys and girls who have been sent there by the courts. Britt said most come from broken homes or from homes where one or both parents work, leaving the children unsupervised.

Once the youths are at the school, they are earned by 10,000 points to be released. Points are earned by doing such things as eating their vegetables, but points are deducted for things such as cursing, Hamlin explained. The students there become bored and frustrated. "Boredom is the great enemy of mankind," Hamlin said. For these students it has been and continues to be.

Dougherty explained that one would think as soon as a student arrived at Dillon, he would begin to earn points immediately to get out as soon as possible. But that is not the case. Hamlin mentioned an incident not uncommon: One of the boys managed to kiss a girl and lost a substantial number of points, but it was worth it to him because he was bored.

"Some of us are frustrated," Hamlin said. "The question is, how do you make it better? The staff people are stymied. What do you do when you can't let people out?"

"There was a group of boys; we played games with them. One had a high IQ; he's artistic. What can he do? They get out into society, who's going to hire them? What are they going to do?"

The program with the volunteers seems to be a step in the right direction, and Hamlin and Hardin commended Britt on her role of coordinating the volunteer program.

"She does a great thing with the volunteer program," Hardin said. "If you could go to a meeting and hear her talk, you'd be persuaded. She does a great thing out there."

Each of these three volunteers stressed the capability of the students and the need for volunteers.

"They're terribly creative," Dougherty said. "If guided, I feel like they have a lot of potential, but they haven't been guided. They certainly have different talents—some are more artistic, some intellectual."

"It kind of opens your eyes to go beyond the stereotypes and labels," he said. "It's a tough problem."

Hamlin emphasized the seriousness of the needs of the adolescents. "There isn't a delicate one among them out there, yet they are all delicate because they are human beings. A lot of them live by their wits; a lot of them have failed to live by their wits. There's a lot of sensitivity and love, but they've never been taught when and where to display them."

"These are people who are rapidly becoming adults, and they don't know what to do about it," Hamlin added. "They don't dare show fear."

"I believe that the problems we all read about have to be addressed. The only way society can be changed is for each of us to do something about it consistently."

Anyone interested in volunteering at the C.A. Dillon school can call Suzanne Coker, Donna Langfelder or Ginger Hatfield at the Campus Y.

The Associated Press

STARKE, Fla. — Quoting Christ's words on the cross, Florida's oldest death row inmate died in the electric chair Thursday for arranging the killing of a private detective, becoming the third man executed in the state in less than five years.

"The only thing is, 'Forgive them, Father, for in their ignorance they know not what they do.' And that's it." Those were the last words of Anthony Antone, 66, heard in a clear voice over a microphone in the death chamber.

He was pronounced dead at 7:08 a.m., seven minutes after the first surge of 2,000 volts coursed through his body. His anonymous executioner, wearing a black hood, received $150 for the job.

WASHINGTON — Front-runner Walter F. Mondale outpolled seven campaign rivals combined Thursday, winning 75 Democratic National Convention delegates out of a 164-member slate picked by House Democrats.

"This is a spectacular beginning and we're confident he's going to go all the way," Mondale aide Richard Moe said after the party's leadership finished picking the final 54 delegates.

"For the first delegate selection process of the season we could not be more pleased."

WINSTON-SALEM — The government will fight a former Ku Klux Klansman's attempt to withdraw his guilty plea and agreement to testify against nine former associates, a prosecutor said Thursday.

Nine current and former Klansmen and Nazis are on trial on charges of violating the civil rights of five Communist Workers Party members shot to death in 1979.
