CGC votes against reprimand

By MARK STINNEFORD
Staff Writer

The campus Governing Council Ethics Committee recommended Monday that Speaker James Exum not be punished for reserving rooms in the Carolina Union for campaign meetings.

Exum, a candidate for student body president, has acknowledged holding "three or four" campaign meetings in the Union, reserving rooms in the name of the CGC or the Black Interdenominational Student Association.

Exum said he used the groups' named with the knowledge and approval of their members.

The Ethics Committee found that Exum was unaware he was violating Union policy in reserving the rooms for campaign meetings, said Ethics Committee member William "Doc" Droze.

Once Exum found out about the policy, he voluntarily stopped reserving rooms, cancelling a campaign meeting he had scheduled for today in the Union, Droze said.

Exum did not attempt to hide the fact he was using the rooms for campaign meetings, said committee member Ron Everett.

"I didn't see any malicious attempt by him to cover it up at all," Everett said.

Officially recognized student organizations are given priority in the use of Union rooms. Students may use the rooms for other purposes, including campaign meetings, if space is available but cannot reserve a room more than a day in advance according to Pam Kyff, chief reservationist for Union rooms.

Exum, who jokingly named the incident "Uniongate," said he was pleased with the committee's decision.

"Now we can get back to a state of normalcy in the CGC office," Exum said. "As far as the campaign is concerned, we can get back to some of the (other) issues that have been raised."

The Ethics Committee consists of Exum, Droze and Everett. Exum relinquished his seat on the committee during the investigation into the room reservations.

Droze predicted the full CGC would accept the committee's recommendations when it meets Wednesday.

The committee could have recommended that Exum be censured by the Proponents of STV, the proposed student TV station, are currently filming around campus for broadcast on Village Cable Channel 11, beginning Feb. 8. U.S. marine dies in Beirut fighting

The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. Marines battled Shiite Moslem militiamen Monday with tank cannon, mortar and machine-gun fire in a daylong series of clashes that killed one Marine. U.S. fire reportedly killed a 9-year-old girl and two other civilians.

Three Marines and two school children were among 29 reported wounded during the three battles that broke out at 9:10 a.m. and lasted past nightfall.

Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said one of two Marines wounded in an afternoon clash died while waiting to be evacuated. The other was flown by helicopter to the amphibious — assault ship Guam off the Beirut coast.

Two Marines suffered slight injuries in mid-morning clashes with the militia. They were treated on the scene and returned to duty, Brooks said.

The Marine who died was the 259th U.S. serviceman to die in combat in Lebanon since the Marines were deployed in Beirut in September 1982. Brooks withheld the marine's name until his family is notified.

Brooks said that in each clash, the Marines fired only after being attacked.

"We have no way of knowing what we hit, and what casualties there were," Brooks said. "We are sorry about any civilian casualties, but the bottom line is that we are taking fire from the area and we have to defend ourselves."

Spokesmen for Amal, the main Shiite militia group, and hospitals in southern Beirut said Marine fire killed three civilians, including the girl, and wounded 22, including two schoolchildren and one militiaman.

In the Shiite neighborhood of Hay el-Sellum, Amal fighters showed AP reporters a blue-green school bus with four large-caliber bullet holes in one side and fresh blood on two of the 12 seats. The bus was carrying children from the Shiite Ahlieh School in nearby Bourj el-Barajneh when it was hit, the Amal militia said.

Lebanon state radio said one of the two Marines injured in the afternoon clash had been shot in the chest. Brooks refused to provide details or name any of the injured Marines.

Brooks said that in an unrelated incident, a Marine guarding the U.S. Embassy in Beirut shot himself in the foot. He was treated at the American University Hospital.

Airport officials said four other Lebanese civilians suffered shrapnel wounds in shelling that forced suspension of air traffic for two hours in the morning and one hour in the afternoon.

Passengers and airport workers scurried to basements and bomb shelters as shells slammed into the airport's parking lot near the gate to the Marine base, state radio said.

Meanwhile, in Damascus, President Reagan's special envoy, Donald Rumsfeld, and Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy met twice with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam, whose nation backs anti-government militia forces in Lebanon and an estimated 30,000 troops there.

Rumsfeld said after the first, 3 1/4-hour meeting that Khaddam suggested, "I have been wrongly briefed in Washington and that I should stay here a couple of days in order to allow him to brief me on the situation."

Spokesmen for Amal, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the Marines' first shot was at a group of militiamen reinforcing a sandbagged position about 20 to 30 yards from the Marine lines at 8:50 a.m., and wounded one Amal fighter.

Shortly before the fighting tapered off at nightfall, the Marines and Amal fighters traded small arms, machine-gun and automatic rifle fire from lines about 300 to 500 yards at the airport and Hay el-Sellum, a shantytown ravaged in previous rounds of the nine year civil war.

Brooks said shooting was going on around the Marine base 90 minutes after a 6 p.m. truce was reported by police. He said he believed the Lebanese army was fighting with militiamen near the airport and could not tell if Marines were involved.

Brooks said the 9:10 a.m. battle involved small arms fire. A second, half-hour-long attack started at 10 a.m. and involved small arms fire and rocket-propelled grenades from the militiamen and a retaliatory barrage by Marine tanks, 60mm mortars, machine guns and small arms, Brooks said.

A third battle started at 2:30 p.m., Brooks said, starting with small arms fire and escalating to rocket-propelled grenade and mortar fire. He said the Marines fired back with tanks and, eventually, 81mm mortars.

Wrist injury sidelines Smith for one month

By MICHAEL PERSINGER
Assistant Sports Editor

North Carolina point guard Kenny Smith will be sidelined for at least four weeks with a wrist injury he suffered in Sunday's win over Louisiana State in Carmichael Auditorium.

Team physician Joseph DeWalt diagnosed the injury as a scaphoid bone fracture in Smith's left wrist. Treatment will involve immobilization, DeWalt said, and a cast has been placed on the wrist. "We plan to follow Kenny's progress daily," DeWalt said. "We will re-evaluate his condition in one month."

The re-evaluation date is prior to the final week of regular-season play in the ACC, but DeWalt said it was too early to say if Smith will be able to play at that time.

Smith is averaging 10.1 points and 5.2 assists a game this season. He is only the fifth freshman to start in his first varsity game for North Carolina under coach Dean Smith. The others were Phil Ford, Mike O'Koren, James Worthy and Michael Jordan.

"We're disappointed for Kenny because he has been playing so well and was making good improvement defensively," Dean Smith said. "I just hope this won't be too big of a setback for him."

"I'm disappointed for our team because Kenny has played such a major role in our success. He will certainly be missed."

Smith will be replaced in the UNC lineup by 6-3 sophomore Steve Hale and 6-4 junior Buzz Peterson. Both players will share time at point guard.

"I have confidence in Steve and Buzz," Dean Smith said. "I hope we will continue to improve as a team and get Kenny back before the end of the year. Of course, if he does play again this year, he would have to wear a protective device on that wrist."

Smith is not the first Tar Heel to be injured late in the season. A knee injury to Ford hurt North Carolina in the NCAA tournament in 1976, and when the Tar Heels reached the final four in 1977, they had to play without center Tommy LaGarde, who was out with a knee injury. Also in 1977, Ford played with a hyperextended elbow and Walter Davis had a broken finger.

Kenny Smith

When North Carolina was eliminated in the first round of the NCAA tournament in 1978, O'Koren, Rich Yonakor and Jeff Wolf were suffering from injuries that affected their play. Worthy was sidelined with a sprained ankle in 1980 and an ankle injury to Pete Budko proved costly in 1981.

The Tar Heels' first test without Smith will come Wednesday when they face Clemson in Greensboro.

"It will be a little bit of an adjustment for us to play without Kenny," Dean Smith said.

RHA hears proposed housing increase; agrees to give $500 to Springfest '84

By STEVE FERGUSON
Staff Writer

The Residence Hall Association heard a proposal Monday night to increase residence hall housing rates by 18 percent and married student housing by 24 percent.

RHA also agreed to give $500 to Springfest '84 to help fund the concert, which is sponsored by Henderson Residence College.

Wayne T. Kuncel, director of housing, explained to the RHA the plan to raise on campus housing, that will be reviewed by Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Donald Boulton Wednesday. The money is needed to keep up with maintenance on existing dormitories and debt service (similar to a mortgage payment) for the new residence hall. Other reasons for the increase are an 8.4 percent salary increase for employees and increased fees for utilities.

The increase is comparable to other universities in the South, Kuncel said. If occupancy and attendance continue their upward trend, "we can return to a nominal increase in future years," he said.

The housing office is not trying to make a profit, Kuncel said. The increase will allow them to maintain the status quo, he said. "We will only maintain the level at a rate which we require to meet operating expenses," he said.

Even though RAs and ADs are not state employees and not subject to the state wage increase, the proposed budget includes a raise for them to offset the cost of the housing increase, Kuncel said. Instead of the proposed 18 to 24 percent increase, the RHA requested that the housing office increase dorm costs by only $1 per semester in order to provide better maintenance for residence halls. RHA members complained of poor dormitory conditions including green mold in Mangum dormitory.

The RHA also agreed to co-sponsor Springfest '84, a concert sponsored by HRC and planned for April 14.

"I just want a major concert here on campus," said Michael Beverly, program director for Springfest '84. The proposed site is Connor beach and would be free admission, as it has been in the past, Beverly said. Alcohol will not be provided at the concert, he said.

HRC will request $5,000 from Student Government, and the amount the Student Government can give will have an effect on the types of groups that can be invited, Beverly said.

Bands available for the concert include big name bands such as Climax Blues Band, Huey Lewis and the News, REM and Squeeze. If not enough money is raised, lesser-known bands will play for Springfest '84, Beverly said.

"Springfest has always been financially responsible, and HRC is willing to do the dirty work," Beverly said, in his appeal to the RHA for funding support.

RHA President Mark Dalton suggested that the RHA drop plans for sponsoring their own concert and lend their support to Springfest. There isn't sufficient money or time, Dalton said, and traffic control would be a problem on Ehringhaus Field. The RHA voted to discard their plans for sole sponsorship of a spring concert.

Faircloth stresses economic development, government efficiency

By TOM CONLON
Staff Writer

Editor's note: This is the first in a weekly series of profiles on major candidates for governor.

RALEIGH — D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, the first Democratic gubernatorial candidate to file for the 1984 election, said economic development, education and efficiency in government would be his primary goals if elected governor.

In a recent interview at his state campaign headquarters, Faircloth said he was the most qualified candidate because of his experience as N.C. secretary of commerce.

"The other candidates talk about bringing jobs to the state," he said. "I've been responsible for bringing approximately 180,000 jobs to the state, $11.5 billion in new industry and expansion, and increasing tourism, our third-largest source of revenue in this state, from a $1 billion to a $3 billion annual business."

Faircloth served as commerce secretary in Gov. Jim Hunt's administration from 1976 to July 1983 before resigning to run for governor. He announced his candidacy Jan. 3.

Orange county residents benefitted from economic development during his tenure as commerce secretary, he said. "Companies like Data General, Northern Telecom, W.H. Brady Co., Bristol Myers, Union Carbide, General Electric and GTE have provided jobs for the people of Orange county," Faircloth said.

"As chairman of the state highway commission from 1969 to 1972, I approved the project to improve Highway 54 from Chapel Hill to Alamance county and the I-40 connection to I-85 through Orange County," he said. The I-40 link is expected to be completed about 1990.

Faircloth, who is seeking an elected office for the first time, said a pay increase for primary and secondary school teachers was necessary to provide quality education and educators. "We've a decline of people entering the teaching field," he said. "Higher salaries would make teaching a more attractive profession."

Faircloth stopped short of endorsing merit pay, although he said there should be supplemental pay for teachers who perform additional duties. "Merit pay is a good idea, but it's not enforceable," he said. "I don't see how it could be equitably administered."

No pay scale or figures would be set until he was able to examine the complete budget, Faircloth said. "A tax increase will not be necessary," he said. "It's just that education will be a greater priority, and I will reapportion more money to that area than I will to other areas."

The UNC system and the state's 58 community colleges would not be affected by educational changes. "We have one of the finest university systems in the country, and I intend to see that continue," he said. "I think we're doing well in that area of education."

Efficiency in government can be obtained by eliminating bureaucracy, Faircloth said. "There's been a tendency in the past 20 to 25 years to increase programs," he said. "It has an effect of sweeping up tax money, and that is not an infinite revenue source."

The state employees have been the real victims because we've spread ourselves so thin and have been unable to meet our job commitments, salary and merit increases."

On social issues, Faircloth said he supported the ERA in 1982 and would do so again. Brad Crone, deputy press secretary for Faircloth, said Faircloth was "a fiscal conservative, but a moderate on social and other issues."

Faircloth has extensive political experience, despite having never held elected office, Crone said. "He's worked on gubernatorial campaigns for Kerr Scott, Terry Sanford, Bob Scott, Jim Hunt, and on a U.S. Senate campaign for Frank Porter Graham in 1950," he said.

A native of Clinton, Faircloth owns and operates several farms, agricultural-related companies and small businesses throughout eastern North Carolina. He was a member of the N.C. Highway Commission from 1961 to 1964 and chaired the commission from 1969 to 1973. He has been endorsed by former Gov. Terry Sanford and former Charlotte mayor John Belk.
