Lebanon troop withdrawal debated

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Saudi Arabian mediators reported progress Wednesday in efforts to resolve the Lebanese crisis, but Lebanon's feuding factions remained sharply divided over the fate of the troop withdrawal accord with Israel.

President Amin Gemayel was reported ready to scrap the May 17 agreement, as demanded by Syria and its Lebanese Moslem and Druse allies, government sources said. But several Christian leaders warned they would withdraw their support for Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, if the pact were abrogated.

In Washington, officials said the Reagan administration had suspended further deliveries of tanks and armored troop carriers to the Lebanese army. It fears the army may not survive long as a fighting force, and does not want the arms to fall into the hands of the Druse and Shiite militias, according to officials who spoke on condition they not be identified.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Marines at Beirut airport moved more equipment and personnel to 6th Fleet ships offshore.

The pullback of the 1,300 Marines officially began Tuesday, although they had been withdrawing surplus equipment and supplies for days. By Wednesday, they had loaded "two and a half ships," said Army Major Don McClary, a Marine spokesman.

McClary said some artillery spotters and military police were redeployed to ships Tuesday, and "small groups of people" moved Wednesday. No line had left

"They remain in place around the perimeter," he said.

Army Col. Ed McDonald, the Marine's chief spokesman in Beirut, said most of the men on the ground would remain until a single, rapid evacuation operation. Rafik Hariri, a Lebanese-born Saudi businessman and a key negotiator, drove to Beirut and conferred with Foreign Minister Elie Salem about the talks with Lebanese opposition and Syrian leaders in Damascus. Also, Prince Bandar Bin Sultan, the Saudi ambassador to Washington, emerged from a meeting with Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam of Syria and said: "We have discussed and decided a few things ... We had a positive and a very good meeting today."

Bandar said Saudi Arabia was "determined this time to end the crisis."

WASHINGTON - The United States has suspended shipments of tanks and armored troop carriers to Lebanon's battered army because of uncertainty over its future as a fighting force, administration officials said Wednesday.

These officials, speaking on condition they remain anonymous, said the administration is studying what to do about leaving American military trainers in Lebanon.

"Everything's in a state of flux," said one official. "If there is something to save, we'll do so."

Meanwhile, sources said the Israelis are trying to re-form remnants of a shattered Lebanese army brigade into a unit that could serve to help defend an Israeli-occupied zone in southern Lebanon.

WASHINGTON - Congress' chief economist predicted Wednesday that federal budget deficits could be more than $300 billion higher through the end of the decade than the Reagan administration estimates.

That news prompted congressional Democrats to unleash a new barrage of criticism against President Reagan's proposed fiscal 1985 budget, including charges of "political fraud" and a demand that he withdraw it and try CHARLOTTE - The North Carolina finance chairman for Sen. John Glenn's presidential campaign says his candidate should throw in the towel before Tuesday's New Hampshire primary.

"It's over," Clifton L. Benson of Raleigh said.

Benson said he quit trying to raise funds for Glenn about a month ago "because I didn't think he could make it. He didn't have the money or the organization and never caught fire here."

But Herbert McKim, chairman of Glenn's state steering committee disagreed. "We have done some polling nationally, asking people to describe what they would like to see as a presidential candidate, and what it comes out - the North Carolina segment - is a description of Glenn," he ASHEVILLE - White-collar crime, as evidenced by the vote-buying scandal in Clay County, is on the rise in North Carolina, says the agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina.

The phenomenon involves more money than politics, however, Robert L. Pence said Tuesday before speaking to the Asheville chapter of the National Association of Accountants.

The average instance of computer crime involves the illegal transfer of $621,000, he said. On the average, computer crime nets its organizers 10 times as much as does armed robbery.
