BONN — The West German government has agreed to spend $2.5 billion over the next decade to deploy 99 NATO anti-aircraft missiles in West Germany, the Defense Ministry announced Tuesday.

Defense Minister Manfred Woerner, starting a visit to Washington on Wednesday, is to sign agreements with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to buy and deploy 12 U.S.-built Patriot missiles.

Bonn will also deploy 87 Roland missiles being built by the West Germans and the French. Twenty-seven will be stationed in the Eifel and Hunsrueck areas of West Germany, where they will protect American air bases.

The other 60 will be deployed around West German airports that could be used by American forces in an emergency.

As part of the deal with the United States, the American military will deploy an additional 12 Patriots at U.S. bases in southern Germany, and Bonn will maintain and service them, the Defense Ministry said.

The Patriots are equipped with a conventional warhead and can hit targets at medium and high altitudes. They are intended to replace outdated Nike missiles. The Rolands, also with non-nuclear warheads, would protect air bases from low-flying enemy planes.

In an interview with Der Spiegel magazine, Woerner called the anti-aircraft missiles "a most important program to strengthen the conventional NATO defense in Europe."

In a recent interview with the Associated Press, Woerner advocated a "two-way street" in arms sales between the United States and Western Europe.

He said the United States and Europe must be able to sell weapons to each other. "We expect that, from the start, the two-way street will be observed in this area," Woerner said.

WASHINGTON — Talks aimed at plugging the high-speed hardware of the communications revolution into the 20-year-old teletype hotline between Washington and Moscow open here on Wednesday, the State Department said Tuesday.

"They will be meeting to discuss possible improvements in communications between our two governments," said Alan Romberg, the State Department's deputy spokesman.

He said the United States hopes for "good progress" but declined to predict the outcome of the talks.

He said the U.S. delegation will be headed by Warren Zimmerman, until recently the deputy chief of mission at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow. The head of the Soviet delegation is A.M. Varbanskiy, chief of administration of the Soviet Ministry of Communications.

The delegations previously met in August 1983 in Moscow, in January 1984 in Washington and in April 1984 in Moscow.

The hotline was set up in the 1960s to speed emergency messages between Washington and Moscow to avert misunderstandings and, thus lower the chances of nuclear war. But officials have been saying the aging system, with its slow-speed teleprinters, could benefit from more modern equipment.

TRENTON — A federal judge Tuesday ordered U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler to reinstate Social Security disability checks retroactively for an estimated 20,000 people denied benefits.

U.S. District Judge Maryanne Trump Barry certified a class-action suit and said she would issue her formal order Thursday.

The ruling applies to those who are challenging in federal court a termination of benefits that occurred during a periodic review, the judge said.

"The government is in effect discriminating through the Treasury," Mrs. Barry said.

Her ruling came in a lawsuit brought by three New Jersey residents who were dropped from the Social Security rolls. The judge agreed that an April order by Mrs. Heckler reinstating benefits to some people while denying benefits to others was unconstitutional.

WASHINGTON — Federal investigators, citing "a chain of misjudgments," concluded Tuesday that the crew of an Air Canada jetliner underestimated the severity of an on-board fire and waited too long to make an emergency landing.

Twenty-three passengers died from smoke inhalation last year in the air tragedy, which focused the aviation industry's attention on a lack of adequate fire protection aboard the nation's jetliners.

The National Transportation

Safety board, concluding its report on the accident, praised the captain of Air Canada Flight 797 for landing the jetliner despite heavy smoke in the cockpit and damaged navigational instruments, enabling the other 23 people on board to escape.

But the safety board in a draft report said the captain should have acted at least three minutes sooner than he did to begin an emergency descent. It also said the crew members failed to analyze the severity of the fire and recognize its danger.

Repeatedly, crew members advised the captain that the fire in a rear lavatory was being brought under control when in fact "there was no reason to believe" that the fire was being controlled, one investigator told the board.

BUTNER — Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt has been released on bond from the Federal Correction Institution in Butner and admitted for treatment at Duke University Medical Center.

Flynt, who is serving a 15-month prison term for contempt of court stemming from a hearing in the John De Lorean cocaine case, was released on an appeal bond July 5, said Charlie Stuart, executive assistant to the warden at FCI.

Flynt is scheduled for trial July 17 on charges he obstructed and impeded justice in November when he screamed obscenities at the U.S. Supreme Court justices.

TILGHMAN ISLAND — President Reagan, complaining that people don't believe him, insisted Tuesday as he set out to tour a national wildlife refuge that the environmental movement has always been a "great interest" of his.

But back in Washington, the leader of the Wilderness Society denounced Reagan's trip, saying: "The environment is being used as another prop in this administration's public relations campaign."
