Cobey plans fundraising events

By TOM CONLON Staff Writer

Republican 4th congressional candidate Bill Cobey of Chapel Hill expects to have raised between $400,000 and $450,000 by the Nov. 6 election date.

Cobey, who is challenging six-term Democratic incumbent Ike Andrews, is making his second attempt for the 4th district seat since being narrowly defeated by Andrews in the 1982 election. Cobey is a former athletic director at UNC.

A July 20 financial disclosure statement showed the Cobey campaign had raised $140,000 by mid-summer. John King, Cobey for Congress campaign manager, did not disclose current figures of funds raised, saying "It's not good to let your opponent know what you've raised since the last financial disclosure statement."

For the first six months of 1984, the Andrews campaign raised $70,001 and spent $35,783, according to federal campaign reports. Cobey raised $130,837 during the same period, spending $120,386.

Cobey's 1982 campaign focused on direct-mail fund raising and featured national political figures campaigning on Cobey's behalf. Andrews, convicted of driving under the influence of alcohol shortly before the election, won despite the $700,000 raised by the Cobey campaign.

First 'non-fiction novelist'

Cobey's 1982 race was said to be the closest possible upset of a Democratic incumbent during an off-election year in which Republicans lost about 26 seats in the U.S. House of Representatives. Only one Republican defeated a Democratic incumbent congressional candidate that year. The Andrews campaign said Cobey's negative television ads were the reason for Cobey's defeat.

King said Cobey's current campaign is not depending as much on mass mailouts and visiting political figures for fund raising this year.

"We plan fund raising events that will feature Bill as the candidate," King said. "We will know after Labor Day what other sources we will get. Most major speakers will either be working the Reagan-Bush campaign or campaigning for their own races."

Other congressional races, such as the 8th district race between Democratic incumbent Bill Hefner and Republican challenger Harris Blake, have had nationally prominent speakers, including former President Gerald Ford and U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., campaign in North Carolina on behalf of Republican candidates. Kemp's appearances in the Tar Heel state have been said to make him a leading choice for president in 1988 among North Carolina delegates to the 1984 Republican National Convention. The Cobey campaign, with another $200,000 to $300,000 to raise in order to meet its fundraising goal, expects to raise between 60-65 percent of its funds from within the 4th congressional district. The district includes the counties of Orange, Wake, Franklin, Chatham and Randolph. Remaining funds are expected to come from political action committees and contributions from outside the 4th district, King said.

"About 70 percent of our funds will come through fund raising events and from personal contributions via letters or telephone calls," King said. "Between 20 to 25 percent will come from PACs, and 5 to 10 percent from individuals contacted by Bill personally - usually as in-kind gills through services.

"Bill has personal contacts in other parts of the country, and most of the outof-district contributions are from people Bill has met as athletic director or otherwise during his life. He stayed with friends in Dallas at the Republican convention."

Among out-of-state contributions, Cobey has received money from Texas oil companies and individuals.

Cobey plans several fund raisers throughout the district during the fall campaign, including Chapel Hill, King said.

Bush accuses Democrats of weakness

and a second second

WASHINGTON - Vice President George Bush accused his Democratic opponents Sunday of advocating "peace through weakness" and "a defense policy with no backbone."

In remarks prepared for the opening of the Disabled American Veterans convention in Washington, Bush said Walter F. Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro "talk as if peace and weakness mean the same thing."

Bush addressed the disabled veterans two days after President Reagan, in a speech to the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Chicago, suggested indirectly that Mondale was a "jackass" for opposing the major new weapons systems Reagan has advocated.

White House Chief of Staff James Baker downplayed Reagan's remark in an appearance Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press." Saying Reagan was quoting former Democratic House Speaker Sam Rayburn when he used the term, Baker said the president "certainly did not intend to say that (jackass) with respect to the nominee on the other ticket, as some have suggested."

Ferraro celebrates twice

FORT LEE, N.J. - Geraldine Ferraro celebrated her birthday Sunday by urging women to use their right to vote - written into the Constitution exactly 64 years ago - to make her the nation's first female vice president.

"Sixty-four years ago today, women couldn't hold public office," she said. "In 1984, we'll elect one of our own to the nation's second highest office."

At the celebration of "Women's Equality Day," Ferraro quoted Susan B. Anthony, one of the most prominent early feminists.

"In 1906, only a month before her death at age 85, after a lifetime devoted to women's rights, Susan B. Anthony addressed a women's suffrage convention in Baltimore. 'Failure,' she said, 'is impossible.' She's right - failure is impossible," Ferraro said.

Cargo ship sinks

PARIS - A French cargo ship was carrying 450 tons of radioactive material when it collided with a ferry off the Belgian coast and sank, the owners said Sunday.

In a communique issued by its Paris headquarters, the Compagnie General Maritime identified the material as uranium hexaflouride, a radioactive gas. It said the 15 special containers were intact at the time the Mont Louis sank Saturday, and were built to last under water for up to a year without leaking.

Company officials said the cargo ship was hit in the stern and the crew was able to determine that the containers, stowed in the forward cargo hold, were undamaged before they abandoned ship.

The communique said that even if a leak were to develop, the radioactive material would quickly be diluted by sea water and the increase in radioactivity would be "negligible with no consequence for man or the environment."

Explosion in Charlotte

CHARLOTTE - Crews worked Sunday to repair a downtown street damaged when a gasoline tank truck exploded, igniting utility poles, melting metal canoes at a store and forcing the temporary evacuation of 1,500 people, authorities said.

Residents of nearby homes and an apartment complex and guests at a hotel were forced to leave the area for about three hours on saturday because officials feared that gasoline pouring into sewers might explode, said fire Battalion Chief K.L. Flowe.

The explosion was touched off when a suspect being chased by police drove his car into the tanker at about 4:30 a.m., said police spokesman Bob Moss.

The driver of the car, Robin Eugene land, 21, of Charlotte, was in good condition at Charlotte Memorial Hospital with burns, officials said. The truck driver, Sanford Preyor, of York, S.C., was not injured.

Helms cuts ad costs

RALEIGH - Sen. Jesse Helms apparently has saved his campaign hundreds of thousands of dollars by using an advertising agency set up by his political advisers, a Raleigh newspaper reported Sunday.

The News and Observer reported that the Helms campaign has used its own agency to buy television commercials during the past year. As a result, the Helms campaign has netted at least $346,000 in discounts from television stations, according to purchase records and contracts filed with 22 stations in North and South Carolina.

The newspaper said the discounts or commissions, terms used interchangeably, ordinarily would have been paid to outside ad agencies.

of his 60th birthday, created a new literary genre of the "nonfiction novel" with his chilling In Cold Blood, but his hunger for celebrity and flamboyant, gossipy lifestyle sometimes overshadowed his achievements, friends and critics said.

LOS ANGELES - Truman Capote, who died just short

"He was a delightful man ... He was witty and direct," film director John Huston said Sunday. "Anyone would fall victim to Truman's charms."

But Capote also had fought against a long addiction to alcohol and drugs. "I've always seen myself as a winner, even as a kid," he said in 1980. " If I hadn't, I just might have gone down the drain a couple of times."

Capote - who won acclaim at age 23 for Other Voices, Other Rooms and a decade later for Breakfast at Tiffany's, which was made into a movie - died in his sleep Saturday at the home of Joanne Carson, divorced second wife of "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson. Mrs. Carson found Capote's body and called paramedics. Capote, one of a number of houseguests, was described as being in good spirits Friday night, when he, Mrs. Carson and others were "making plans to celebrate his 60th birthday next month," police said. According to police, Capote had prescription drugs with him, but it was unknown know what they were, and there was no evidence of foul play.

on the book appeared in 1967.

He spent six years researching the story and conducted hundreds of interviews, some with the two men convicted of killing the family.

William Kennedy, author of the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel Ironweed, said Sunday that Capote "created the term the 'nonfiction novel" " with In Cold Blood. He said Capote changed "the way writers and editors looked at how a piece of writing about reality was to be structured."

Capote's writing showed "a very conscious sense of a craftsman doing his craft, said Walker Percy, author of The Moviegoer and Love in the Ruins. "At his best he was really first rate."

Author Studs Terkel said in Chicago, "Naturally, he was gifted, but the tragedy was a lot of it was wasted in gossipy chronicles. But In Cold Blood was a magnificent work, such compassion. Call it new fiction if you will, it showed the darkness that may be in all of us."

RALEIGH - Fundamentalist minis- talists. The Rev. Jerry Falwell, founder lines, they said, a half-dozen indicated

Mrs. Carson, who called Capote "my best friend," said he had been in ill health and diagnosed as having phlebitis, an inflammation of the veins in which blood clots can form.

The 5-foot-4 author was known for his Southern-accented, high-pitched lisp and acid wit. He had a lengthy feud with author Gore Vidal, who once sued Capote over his remarks in an interview.

At the time of his death, Capote was working on his longpromised and already controversial novel Answered Prayers. Excerpts from the book were published in Esquire magazine in 1975, and scandalous stories about his celebrity friends in the segment "La Cote Basque" cost him some friendships.

"His last book Answered Prayers was not entirely autobiographical, but it did deal with a male character that was a kind of male Holly Golightly, the call girl character in Breakfast at Tiffany's," Capote's literary representative said.

Of all Capote's works In Cold Blood, telling about the ruthless slaying of four members of a Kansas farm family, drew the most attention when published because of his then-new technique of combining facts with a novelist's writing style. A film based Capote's works totaled fewer than 20 volumes. The New York Times quoted his friend John Malcolm Brinnin as saying he felt Capote had squandered his time, talent and health on the pursuit of celebrity, riches and pleasure.

Capote said in a 1978 interview: "I had to be successful, and I had to be successful early." He described himself as "a very special person, and I had to have a very special life."

His short stories won three O. Henry Memorial awards. He also collaborated on screenplays, working with Huston on the 1954 film Beat the Devil, and with William Archibald for the 1961 movie The Innocents. He won an Emmy award for his 1967 television adaptation of his work A Christmas Memory.

Born Truman Streckfus Persons in New Orleans on Sept. 30, 1924, to a former Miss Alabama, Capote was reared mostly by aunts and grandmothers. He once said that as a child, he felt no one understood him. "I guess that's why I started writing. At least on paper I could put down what I thought."

He never completed high school, but gained celebrity in 1948 at the age of 23, with his lyrical first novel, Other Voices, Other Rooms, which shocked many readers with its openly homosexual theme.

He mixed alcohol and medication "like some sort of cocktail," he said in a July 1978 television interview. In recent years he had been hospitalized for a drug overdose and pleaded guilty to a drunken driving charge.

"I'm an alcoholic. I'm a drug addict. I'm homosexual. I'm a genius," he wrote in Music for Chameleons.

"Of course, I could be all four of these dubious things and still be a saint."

their congregations to go to the polls in Novemeber and vote their conservative convictions.

Some of the ministers are participating in a voter mobilization drive coordinated by Moral Majority. Others have conducted voter registration and political information sessions for years.

"I never tell people who to vote for," said the Rev. H.W. Carey of Raleigh, pastor of Neuse Baptist Church. "But I tell them that I'm embracing such and such a candidate."

Several fundamentalist ministers said a longtime reluctance for political involvement - still prevalent among mainstream denominations - is giving way to belief that churches-must try to influence the nation's moral climate.

"We should have an interest in seeing this country return to its founding precepts," said the Rev. Randy Cox of First Free Will Baptist Church in Raleigh.

Nationally, the growing involvement of conservative churchmen in politics has caused some division among fundamen-from the Rev. Bob Jones III, president of Bob Jones University in South Carolina, for being too involved in worldly affairs.

Apparently, there is little of that concern among fundamentalist leaders in North Carolina.

Dr. John Steely, professor of theology at Southeastern Baptist Seminary in Wake Forest, said that fundamentalist churches in North Carolina "are becoming more politically active and assertive." The trend carries through independent Baptists, the Free Will Baptist denominations and more conservative churches within mainstream denominations such as the Southern Baptist Convention, he said.

Through his North Carolina roots, Sen. Jesse Helms, as a symbol of the New Right, may have provided a stronger impetus for political involvement by churches in his home state than nationally, several ministers said.

While their sponsorship of candidates is not aligned to the Democratic or Republican parties and often crosses party

Carey and other North Carolina fundamentalist ministers interviewed last week said they disagreed strongly that the doctrine of church-state separation requires abstinence from political activity. The constitutional doctrine, they contended, was designed to ensure that the U.S. government did not establish churches or interfere with the free exercise of religious differences - not to discourage ministers or congregations from being involved in politics.

The Rev. Lenny D. Anderson, pastor of Rejoicing Life Baptist Church of Raleigh, said all the voting-age members of his congregation of 500 were registered to vote.

"I tell them to get all the facts and then get on their knees and pray, to ask the Holy Spirit for guidance on Election Day," Anderson said. "When people speak out about the moral climate, politicians listen. The ballot box terrorizes them."
