

Action on NRA motion delayed

The Associated Press

RALEIGH — A Superior Court judge delayed action yesterday on a motion by the National Rifle Association which challenges the constitutionality of state laws regulating political action groups and lobbyists.

Jim Blackburn, a Raleigh attorney representing the NRA, and Wake District Attorney Randolph Riley said Judge Donald Smith asked them to gather additional legal information, which they would not describe.

Smith did not set a time for hearing arguments on five NRA motions to dismiss the charges or set aside the indictment.

The NRA seeks to set aside the indictment because it did not act as a political committee, but as a non-profit corporation, and to dismiss the charges because they restrict the NRA's First Amendment right to free expression, and because they are too vague.

The charges stem from a mailing by the NRA's Institute for Legislative Action to its 58,000 members in North Carolina urging them not to support gubernatorial candidate Eddie Knox in the May 8 primary.

Knox, former Charlotte mayor, was the top finisher in the first primary but was defeated by Attorney General Rufus Edmisten in the June 5 Democratic runoff.

If convicted, the NRA could be fined between $100 and $5,000 and its officers imprisoned for up to one year.

State campaign reporting laws prohibit corporations, labor unions, professional associations and insurance companies from making contributions or expenditures on behalf of or in opposition to any political candidate.

Such groups may, however, communicate with employees, stockholders or members and their families. The controversy focuses on what may be contained in those communications.

The NRA argues that it may talk with members about any subject. The state contends that such communications may involve nonpartisan registration, get-out-the-vote campaigns or to establish and solicit contributions to a separate fund to be used for political purposes.

In its letters to North Carolina members, the NRA said Knox advocated handgun control while a state senator in 1974. The group also enclosed a bumper sticker that said, "If Knox wins, you lose."

Knox introduced a bill that would have required handgun owners to have a permit when carrying a pistol away from home or office. Lawmakers never voted on the bill.

Knox said the bill was designed to control the abuse of "Saturday night specials."

He asked the state Board of Elections to review the case and take action against the NRA. The board decided the NRA probably had violated a state law.

Maple leaf conservatives sweep races

From Staff and Wire Reports

TORONTO — Brian Mulroney led Canada's Progressive Conservative Party to a landslide victory over Liberal Prime Minister John Turner in yesterday's elections, giving them a parliamentary majority for the first time in 26 years.

Mulroney won election to the Parliament easily in northeastern Quebec, and his Conservative colleagues won or led in more than 140 other districts, with votes still uncounted in the western provinces, where the Conservatives are traditionally strong.

In the four east coast provinces, the Conservatives defeated three incumbent Liberal Cabinet ministers and took 25 of the 32 seats, compared to only 13 in the 1980 election.

The Conservatives also made sweeping gains in Liberal strongholds in Ontario and Quebec, guaranteeing a majority of the 282 seats in Parliament for Prime Minister-elect Mulroney. Both national television networks projected that the Conservatives would win close to 200 seats.

The Conservatives last won a similar sweep in 1958, under John Diefenbaker. The Liberals have been in control for all but nine months of the past 21 years, including 15 years under Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

News in Brief

With the western provinces still to be heard from, the Conservatives were getting 52 percent of the national vote, to 34 percent for the Liberals and 12 percent for the New Democrats, Canada's socialist party.

Terror in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG. South Africa — Police firing rubber bullets and tear gas yesterday drove off crowds of looters and arsonists plundering wrecked shops in three black townships where rioting Monday killed 26 people.

More buildings were burned, but the townships were comparatively quiet yesterday, and no new casualties reported. As many as 300 injured had been reported during the riots Monday, the worst black violence in South Africa since the 1976 Soweto uprising.

Police Commissioner Gen. Johan Coetzee told the South African Press Association there was "strong evidence" the unrest was being brought under control, although sporadic stone throwing, looting and arson continued.

Police said 12 more bodies were found in Sharpeville, Sebokeng and Evatom townships, 45 miles south of Johannesburg. Fourteen bodies were recovered earlier from Monday's rioting.

The Star newspaper in Johannesburg quoted sources at Sebokeng Hospital, which serves the black townships, on the number of wounded.

Blacks set fire to dozens of shops and houses and rained gasoline bombs and bricks on police Monday. The immediate cause of the rampage appeared to be rent increases announced by the local black council last week. Rioters killed three members of the council, hacking and burning one of them to death, national radio said.

But black opponents of the white-minority government said underlying the unrest was anguish over the most severe recession since the 1930s and the continued denial of political rights to the black majority of 22 million.

Monday's riots were the bloodiest for a single day since the riots in 1976 leaving nearly 600 dead.
