

Lady golfers come of age

The North Carolina women's golf team will finally come of age this year, drawing most of its talent from an experienced crop of juniors and seniors that are hardened veterans of the two-season golf campaign.

It isn't surprising that coach Dot Gunnells is looking forward to this fall season, which will officially start when the Tar Heels compete in the Memphis Women's Intercollegiate at the end of September.

All-American senior Page Marsh heads this year's squad. She will be joined on the team by fellow seniors Kristie Kamal, Susie Lumpkin and Sue Hirsch. Gunnells is expecting a great deal from Marsh and Kamal, both of whom were on last season's 12th-place finishers in the NCAA championships.

"Page plays great under pressure, which she's going to have to do," Gunnells said. "Kristie is really coming into a peak. She really wants this year to be her best."

Juniors Candi Kessler and Kelly Beck are good bets to compete in the team's top five, Gunnells said.

"Candi was our low scorer at the NCAA's last year, and she's very confident in her abilities," Gunnells said. "Kelly is very steady and sound in her game — a great team player."

However, the team is not without youth, as evidenced by the appearance of freshman Elizabeth MacFie, who brings with her an impressive list of accomplishments. MacFie is two-time Carolina Women's Junior Championship title holder. Gunnells expects MacFie to join the top five this season.

In addition to experience, some of the Tar Heels have had outstanding individual play from this summer in order to start the season off right. For instance, Candi Kessler qualified to play in the U.S. Women's Open in Peabody, Mass. and also reached the final eight in the National Women's Amateur, which automatically qualifies her to play in those two tournaments next year. She was also the winner of the Virginia Women's Amateur Championships.

"Page plays great under pressure, which she's going to have to do," Gunnells said. "Kristie is really coming into a peak. She really wants this year to be her best."

Golfers excited about '84

The UNC men's golf team enters the fall season on a crest of excitement following this spring's fourth-place NCAA finish.

UNC, led by NCAA champion John Inman and All-American Davis Love, came within eight shots of winning the national championship in May.

That success has the Tar Heel golfers, including junior Bryan Sullivan, excited about the fall.

"We're really looking forward to this season," said Sullivan, who is entering his third year among the top five. "It's a new challenge for us."

The biggest challenge will be to replace Inman, who shot an NCAA record 15-under-par en route to the national title.

"Losing John was kind of a letdown," Sullivan said. He hesitated when asked about the chances of replacing Inman.

"It's hard to say," he said. "It depends; if we start good, we should carry that confidence into the spring and the nationals."

Davis Love, 1983 ACC medalist and a quarter-finalist in last week's U.S. Amateur tournament in Edmond, Okla., leads the UNC golfers this fall.

Seven UNC football games to be televised

From staff reports

North Carolina football fans will be able to see the Tar Heels on television at least seven times during the upcoming season.

Jefferson Productions, which owns the rights to ACC football, has scheduled the Tar Heels six times, while cable network ESPN will show UNC once. On tap from Jefferson are: the season opener Sept. 15 against Navy, at Wake Forest Oct. 13, N.C. State Oct. 20, Maryland Nov. 3, Virginia

Nov. 17 and at Duke Nov. 24. ESPN will carry the Sept. 22 game at Boston College at 7:30 p.m.

All UNC home games carried by Jefferson will have a noon kick-off time, instead of the original 1 p.m., said Rick Brewer, UNC sports information director. Brewer added that should ABC decide to carry a game on Jefferson's announced schedule, the kick-off would be at 3:30 p.m. ABC has first choice on all games involving the College Football Association, to which all ACC teams belong.

Stankavage signs with Broncos

The Associated Press

DENVER — Scott Stankavage, a rookie free agent from North Carolina, signed a contract with the Denver Broncos on Wednesday, bolstering the team's quarterback corps in the wake of John Elway's shoulder injury.

Stankavage was waived during the Bronco training camp this summer.

He had planned to go to Edmonton where the rookie quarterback was to play in the Canadian Football League, but those arrangements were dropped when the Broncos called him back, according to agent Art Wilkingson.

Elway was sidelined with a shoulder injury during the season opener last Sunday against Cincinnati, and his status for Sunday's game at Chicago is listed as questionable. Denver has only Gary Kubiak as backup quarterback. Veteran Scott Brunner is on the injured reserve list and cannot be activated for another three games.
