Odds and Ends

Aside from the various political, religious and educational organizations, there are numerous others that do not fall under a specific category.

Students can join organizations such as the Carolina Student Fund, which is involved in fundraising, and the Senior Class of 1985, which devises a class gift and helps to promote class spirit.

These "odds-and-ends" organizations are so varied that students are sure to find one that meets their interests.

Carolina Union

The Union's the place to go between classes for a quick Coke, to do a little reading or just to catch some quick sleep for many students.

But it's more than just a building. Activities ranging from College Bowl to films to special-interest groups are going on daily in the Union. There's something for everyone.

Getting involved means helping select Union films for the year, putting up banners and otherwise publicizing activities, planning "Evening at the Profs" and arranging "How to" classes, which teach interested students aerobic dance or how to cook.

Getting involved with your Union makes you a part of Carolina Life essential to most students.
