Extra DWI patrols to end Sunday night

By AMY STYERS

The Chapel Hill Police Department will send its DWI overtime patrol squad to the streets for the last time this weekend.

A Governor's Highway Safety Program grant, funding six hours of overtime pay for Thursday, Friday and Saturday night DWI patrols, expires Sunday, leaving Chapel Hill police to rely on scheduled patrols for enforcement.

The overtime squad has been responsible for about 30 percent of the department's arrests during the past two years, said Master Officer Grugg Jarvies. "We'll be expecting about a 30 percent drop in those arrests," he said.

But the expiration of the grant will not leave the department unprepared to handle DWI enforcement, he added, because officers are now more aware of the problem and better able to enforce the law because of education programs the grant provided.

The three-year grant, which was to be used specifically for DUI and DWI enforcement since October

1982, allocated close to $100,000 to the Chapel Hill Police Department the past two years.

DUI arrests increased about 30 percent from October 1982 to September 1983, but arrests for DWI under the N.C. Safe Roads Act passed last October have decreased since the passage of the law, Jarvies said.

People know the police are enforcing the law and are being more careful, he said.

The grant is a major reason for the drop in arrests, said Billy Crocker, programs representative for the Governor's Highway Safety Program. The education programs for officers and the public will have a lasting effect in the area, he said.

But Jarvies said the education programs have not been able to help with with one problem area: out-oftown drivers, who account for about 25 percent of DWI arrests. "There's no way we can reach them," he said.

Jarvies added that Chapel Hill has a particular problem with drunk driving because of the university atmosphere and the lack of major highways.

Alliance to ask for 6-month halt on new housing projects

By VANESSA WILLIAMS Staff Writer

The Chapel Hill Alliance of Neighborhoods is collecting signatures to petition the Chapel Hill Town Council for a six-month moratorium on the approval of new housing projects.

The petition, which is not yet ready for presentation to the council, is an outgrowth of citizens' concern that Chapel Hill's infrastructure is not expanding to keep pace with the town's rapid development.

The Alliance was formed by 15 or 16 neighborhood groups that felt town development was proceeding so rapidly that the Chapel Hill Planning Board and Town Council did not have a chance to look at overall development, but was approving individual proposals in a piecemeal fashion, said Art Werner, head of the alliance's steering committee.

"Instead of each neighborhood dealing with the town on separate proposals, it made more sense to deal with the town on development as a whole," Werner said.

The alliance wants the council to approve the six-month moratorium on housing project approval so that the council and planning board can "take a long look at growth" and rewrite zoning ordinances to accommodate the infrastructure. The old zoning ordinance is outdated, he said, because when it was written, development was not as rapid as it is now.

Traffic problems, water shortages

Council member Nancy Preston said she agreed with the idea of giving the council a chance to re-evaluate its plans for development. "Too much is happening too quickly for the council to look at the broader picture," she said.

This summer, Preston called for a similar moratorium which the council did not approve because members felt they did not have enough information to make a decision, she said.

Since March 1983, 5,508 new housing units have been proposed, and 3,729 of those have been approved in Chapel Hill. Currently, approval of 1,369 units is pending.

With an approval rate of 90 percent, this growth represents a 33 percent population increase for Chapel Hill.

A four-member task force on growth presented recommendations to the council Monday night and suggested updating the 1977 land use plan. The planning board also presented recommended revisions to the town's comprehensive plan to shift its emphasis to a more physical view of development.

Preston also said she believed the current plan is outdated. The council has not kept the infrastructure up to date and must make an effort to preserve open spaces, she said.

Council member Jon Howes said task force members believed the council could make necessary ordinance changes without a six-month moratorium. "If we can implement changes without a moratorium, we would be ahead of the game," he said.

N.C. employment rate up

The Associated Press

RALEIGH - Eighty-six of North Carolina's 100 counties had singledigit unemployment rates in August, compared with 78 counties in July. the state Employment Security Commission reported yesterday.

"Lower unemployment is even more significant in relation to our all-time high of more than 2.8 million persons employed in August and our civilian labor force which has grown to 3,077,700," said Glenn Jernigan, ESC chairman.

North Carolina's statewide unemployment rate for August was 6.1 percent, compared with a national rate of 7.3 percent and tying the state with New Jersey with the third lowest rate among 11 large states.

Dare County had the lowest jobless rate at 2.4 percent, followed by Currituck County at 3.1 percent, Wake at 3.3 percent and Orange and Durham counties at 3.4 percent. All five were among the 71 counties in which unemployment declined since July.

Counties with the highest unemployment were McDowell, 13.1 percent; Brunswick, 11.9 percent; Bladen, 11.3 percent; Northampton and Graham, 11.1 percent and Cherokee, 10.9 percent.

Death penalty possible for three N.C. men

COLUMBIA, S.C. - Three North Carolina men charged with the slaying of a University of South Carolina coed could face the death penalty if convicted, a South Carolina prosecutor said.

Barbara Lynn "Bobbi" Rossi, 29, disappeared Sept. 17. Her body was found three days later in a wooded area of lower Richland County, S.C. She had been beaten, raped and shot three times. Willie Earl Nesmith, Benjamin A. Joyner and Marcellus Pierce sat during a 15-minute hearing Wednesday with their hands cuffed in front of them.

"I think it's necessary that you appoint two defense lawyers in as much as it is my intention to seek the death penalty against them," prosecutor James Anders told Circuit Judge Edward B. Cottingham during the defendants' initial court appearance.

"I feel very comfortable with the amount of evidence that has been made available to me," the prosecutor said. "This case . . . is one that clearly falls within the purview of the death penalty."

Cottingham ordered the defendants held without bond until courtappointed attorneys could be assigned to represent them. He scheduled a preliminary hearing Oct. 4. Anders said the trial is tentatively slated to begin the week of Nov. 5.
