Warren blocks, passes and slams; Martin not clumsy to the Wolfpack

By SCOTT FOWLER
Assistant Sports Editor

In a three-minute span on a wild Wednesday night, Warren Martin became one of the accepted heroes of Carmichael Auditorium.

It started with 7:40 left in the N.C. State game and State ahead, 58-57, as Cozell McQueen lofted a shot in front of Martin and unceremoniously had it stuffed back in his face.

However, McQueen remembered to recover the ball. He drove inside and again tried to shoot over Martin, once more receiving a facial for his efforts.

On State's next possession, after a Brad Daugherty free throw had tied the score, Martin dove for a loose ball by the UNC bench, recovered it, and launched a perfect outlet pass while lying prone.

One possession later, with UNC ahead by one, Martin took the ball inside on Lorenzo Charles and scored. And to cap off his burst of brilliance, the next time UNC had the ball Martin pump-faked Charles and McQueen into the air, took one huge step and slammed the ball home to give UNC a 66-63 lead.

Martin went out of the game 20 seconds later to a standing ovation from a frenzied Carmichael crowd and a rhythmic chant of "War-ren, War-ren."

No matter that Martin fouled out a minute later. The game was a landmark in his career. No longer will he be regarded merely as an awkward curiosity, the big man who is so often hurt and in street clothes on the UNC sidelines. He played a prominent role in UNC's nearly successful comeback against SMU, and followed that with career highs of 16 points and six blocked shots against State.

State coach Jim Valvano admitted that Martin's inside play affected his team. "We started playing a little tentatively," Valvano said.

According to teammate Kenny Smith, Martin's rapid improvement shows no signs of stopping. "At the beginning of the year, Warren was dominating the game for about five minutes every night. Now he's dominating about 15 minutes. By the end of the year, he'll be dominating the whole game."

Maybe Smith's prediction is a little exaggerated, but Martin has improved in all phases of the game this year. He found Daugherty three times with crisp passes that resulted in easy buckets in the first half and was the Tar Heels' assists leader at halftime. His rebounding was more aggressive, and he even made a valiant attempt in the first half to draw a charge.

Unfortunately, Martin instead was called for a blocking foul on Nate McMillan. To make matters worse, Martin hit the floor hard and after the game wore an icepack stuffed down the back of his shorts, which he adjusted frequently.

But that bruise was one of the few sore spots in Martin's performance. "I played well," Martin said. "It's my best game, at least statistically, although appearances can sometimes be deceiving. If I can't find something wrong with how I played, I'm sure Coach Smith will."

Such down-to-earth answers characterize Martin. When asked what he personally remembered most about the game, he smiled. "Kenny's dunk. It was really beautiful."

Whether Martin will continue to be such an intimidating factor on defense remains to be seen. Dean Smith was pleased along with everyone else about Martin's performance Wednesday, but reminded the media that Martin hadn't enjoyed the same shot-blocking success against Jon Koncak of SMU.

"Warren's shot-blocking was exceptional," Smith said. "I was planning on him doing that against Koncak. Sam Perkins says 'I can't shoot over Warren and I don't think Koncak can.'"

Smith paused. "Koncak can."

Miss Beverly Horne Price, The Yucatan was simply marvelous. I would have brought back a souvenir but I'm not sure you would have known what to do with it. Such a shame, your mother taught you better than that. Spinsterhood is a pain. Just remember, Auntie knows what's good for female troubles. Kiss, Kiss. Aunt Mildred.

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY... This has been the best year of my life. The past year has yielded many firsts for both of us. You have seen D.C. and I have wandered the streets of NYC. However, there are a few other things that did happen. Remember? Breadman's, Religion Class, "Where the hell is Testes Park?", Taking Rinks, Bert's Lake Palace, Lake Tillery, Your Car, Sub Sandwiches, A Sloppy Dresser at the Porch, Getting Mad, Making Up, Your Car, Prince, New Year's, Free Pizza Night, Myrtle Beach with the Girls, Coming Back Sunburned Bohemians, Getting Winter Tans, "Your Car, A Couple?", Lerner's, Ms. Englesnoe, a game of MOVIES and some generously added love. WE MIXED VERY WELL. ANNIE—ROOINIE. TIME TO PUT US IN A PRE-HEATED OVEN—CHECK THE SLATS FIRST—AND COOK FOREVER. WAITING IN THE AISLES IN A WANTON AND LUSTFUL MANNER IS SOMEONE WHO STILL RESPECTS YOU.
