

JV cheerleader remains in critical condition

By RACHEL STIFFLER
Staff Writer

Robin Davidson, a junior varsity cheerleader who fractured her skull in a fall before a basketball game on January 15, remains in critical condition in North Carolina Memorial Hospital with no significant improvements or complications.

Tanya Beeren, a sophomore from Charlotte and a friend of Davidson, said Davidson has had "good and bad spells, but lately there had been more good ones than bad ones — maybe because everyone has been praying so hard for her."

Doctors are draining cerebrospinal fluid from Davidson's brain and are monitoring her heart and cranial pressure, Beeren said. The high dosages of medication that Davidson is being given to lower the pressure are keeping her in an unconscious state. "The doctors have started reducing the medication during the past week, but they can't reduce it for long periods of time because the pressure goes back up," Beeren said.

Beeren said the pressure was down on Wednesday night but had risen again yesterday morning. "It seems to come and go about every twelve hours," she said, adding that even though Davidson was not being given pain-killing medication, she had felt no pain in her unconscious state.

"She's really not on her way to getting better yet. Right now it could swing both ways. They won't know about brain damage until she wakes up. And they don't know how long it will take her to recover once she does wake up; it could be a year."

Beeren said Davidson's parents were doing well, and that she and other close friends were constantly there at the hospital to help them through this difficult time and also to answer questions from Davidson's friends. "We're going to be here as long as it takes," she said.

Carrboro alderman ban drinking beer, wine in public

By KAREN ROGERS
Staff Writer

The Carrboro Board of Aldermen agreed Tuesday night to place a ban on the public consumption of beer and wine on town property.

Beer and wine are not included in the State law, which already prohibits the public consumption of liquor.

Chapel Hill has had such an ordinance since 1966.

The ban was requested by Alderman John Boone. He said that merchants in west Carrboro had been complaining about the problem, and while he said it has been an issue for several years, the merchants brought their complaints to town officials only recently. He said that there had also been complaints about drinking in public parks at recreational events.

Boone said the ban went into immediate effect and covers any area that is the property of the town, from sidewalks to parks.

Carrboro Mayor Jim Porto, on the other hand, said he thought the city was taking too broad an approach to the problem. He said he felt that there are some occasions, such as small picnics, the Fourth of July, etc., in which public consumption of beer and wine is acceptable and harmless. Porto's position, however, does not allow him to vote on such matters except in the case of a tie.

Winner of the Miss Omega Psi Phi Pageant last night was Desiree Smith, a senior majoring in industrial relations, Smith is from Hillsboro, N.C.

For the record
A story on property taxes (Jan. 23, DTH) incorrectly stated that students could pay six times their monthly rent in lieu of listing their property. The story should have said students could pay taxes on the value represented by six times their monthly rent. The Daily Tar Heel regrets the error.
