State uses depth to beat UNC in women's hoops

By MIKE SCHOOR
Staff Writer

North Carolina guard Pam Leake, the ACC's leading women's basketball scorer, played 38 minutes and 12 seconds Saturday night in Raleigh, before fouling out with 18 points, six rebounds and seven assists.

Leake's rival for conference player of the year, Linda "Hawkeye" Page, both watched and participated in the Wolfpack's 70-63 come-from-behind win, scoring 18 points in her 21 minutes on the court.

The reality is that Leake must play while Page can rest. UNC coach Jennifer Alley's thin roster includes nine players, two of whom are inexperienced walk-ons. Twentieth-ranked N.C. State mentor Kay Yow calls on all 11 of her players.

So it surprised none of the 3000 fans at Reynolds Coliseum when substitutes Annemarie Treadway (10 points and 12 rebounds) and Carla Hillman (five points, two key steals) rallied N.C. State from a 10-point second-half deficit, keying a 22-5 spurt in the final 8:09 and powering the Wolfpack's seventh win in a row.

With the victory, N.C. State squelched both UNC's bid for league leadership and its eight-game winning streak. The Wolfpack moved to 17-5, 9-1 in the ACC. North Carolina dropped to 15-8, 9-3 in the conference.

Leake said she expected to see everybody on the Wolfpack bench play and contribute.

"Their bench was the difference," Leake said. "They were always fresh. State can bring in five new people (including) an Annemarie Treadway for a spark. We don't have five players to put in."

Interestingly, though, Leake said fatigue did not hamper the Tar Heels. "We didn't run out of gas," she said. "We've been playing seven players (regularly) for 23 games now. I'm used to playing all those minutes ... still at times I was a little winded."

— Pam Leake

Five UNC players played 30 minutes or more, including senior point guard Pam Hammond, who played the duration. Conversely, devilish guard Robin Mayo (six points, six assists, six steals) was the only State player to play 30.

The season series moved to 2-1 in State's favor and the teams have split their last six meetings. The intrastate rivalry carries over to women's basketball, as UNC fans pointed for weeks to "that big State game."

But Leake and Hammond prepared no differently than usual for N.C. State.

"The rivalry is more than against us, than us against them," said Hammond. UNC's all-time assist leader with 463. "They think they are the best team in North Carolina and they try to prove it in recruiting, in coaching and on the court."

"When we play them, it's just another game on the schedule."

Leake whistled a similar tune. "To me, there's no rivalry," said Leake, a 5-7 junior from Chapel Hill. "I look at N.C. State like any other game because I grew up here and too much was made of it ... because of the men's teams."

"This is behind us. We've got to beat Duke (Feb. 13) and Wake Forest (Feb. 20) and look forward to the ACC Tournament."

UNC wrestling team sweeps to ACC wins

By MIKE WATERS
Staff Writer

The North Carolina wrestling team came away with two impressive ACC wins Friday and Saturday as coach Bill Lam's Tar Heels readied themselves for the ACC tournament.

In Friday's 26-12 victory over Virginia and Saturday's 42-6 trouncing of Maryland, North Carolina served notice that it will be ready to challenge N.C. State in the tournament to be held March 1 and 2 in Carmichael Auditorium.

This weekend's matches were especially important for UNC after losing to the Wolfpack for the second time this season in Raleigh Thursday night. That 25-12 loss apparently stoked the flames under the Tar Heels at the expense of a few Wahoos and Terrapins.

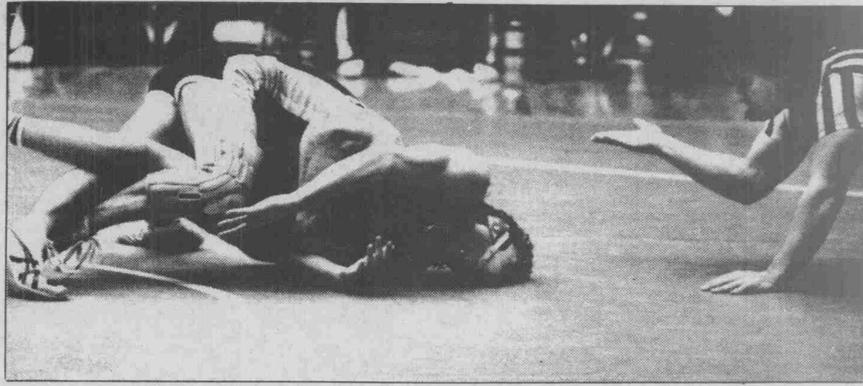

One Tar Heel who didn't need much provoking was sophomore Al Palacio. Palacio, ranked 7th nationally at 118, raised his record to 25-4 with a 19-3 technical fall over Maryland's Joe Crisafi that set the tone for Saturday night's massacre.

North Carolina has been dominating opponents in the lower weight classes all year and Palacio has been the trendsetter. Wins are in fashion this winter for Palacio.

"We looked pretty tough the last couple of days," Palacio said. "This weekend was very important seeding-wise for the tournament."

Chip McArdle took just two minutes out of his Saturday night to register a quick pin of Terrapin Tony Russo. The junior also notched a 13-5 win against Virginia.

Staulters kept things going against Maryland and stretched the UNC margin to 18-0 with a technical fall

UNC's wrestlers readied themselves for the ACC tourney and rival N.C. State with two impressive wins decision. Staulters has replaced junior John Aumiller for the past week of action at 126 pounds. Another Tar Heel replacement, who had two big wins, was Matt King at 142. King stepped into the starting line-up following freshman standout Len Bernstein's broken thumb a week ago versus Clemson. King earned a 3-1 decision over UVA's John Parr with a reversal with less than a minute left in the final period. King's superior decision Saturday moved the score to 21-0, UNC.

Bernstein's roommate, Rob Koll, proved he was ready for the ACC tournament with a first-period pin Friday and an 18-3 technical fall Saturday. The freshman manhandled both his opponents and continued to be a counted-on winner in the middle divisions with a 26-6 overall record.

The upper divisions have been a problem for Lam's squad in 1985, but there were signs of a breakthrough the past couple of days. At 158, Joe Silvestro notched two wins including a tough 7-3 victory over Joe Schwab of Maryland. UNC led 30-0 and the eleventh win of the season was guaranteed.

"For me, this was a really big weekend," said Silvestro. "I've been in kind of a slump, but I'm starting to come out of it. Coach said 'go out and have some fun.' Winning is fun. We're ready for our ACC and national run."

Silvestro said that while the second loss to N.C. State hurt, the Tar Heels still believed a conference championship could be won. He pointed to the scores of UNC's matches versus Virginia and Maryland and those of State's as evidence.

Tad Wilson followed Silvestro with a win on both outings. His 18-5 win over Virginia's John Wagner sealed Friday's win and eased the pressure on UNC's heavier wrestlers, who have had problems battling back from several nagging injuries.

In the three heaviest divisions, only heavyweight Stacey Davis earned a win this weekend. He won, 7-5, against Maryland to end the slaughter. Before him Greg Zwilling walked out to gain credit for a six-point win when Maryland forfeited at the 190-pound class.

ACC tix distribution starts today

Students who won in the drawing for ACC Basketball Tournament tickets have to pay for them before Wednesday at 4:30 p.m., or else lose their rights to the tickets.

People whose names were on the sheets have to bring their student IDs and athletic passes and pay today through Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The $70 cost covers all the games in the tournament. Students will pay at the ticket office and receive a receipt, which will be exchanged in Atlanta for the tickets.

Students who signed up on sheet numbers 57, 70, 82 and 74 are eligible, and can only buy one book of tickets.

If alternates are needed, tickets will be distributed to the first alternate (sheet number 59) on Thursday and to the second alternate (sheet number 72) on Friday. If tickets remain after that, the distribution information will be published next week in The Daily Tar Heel.

Bowman Gray pool bids a silent goodbye

By SCOTT CANTERBERRY
Staff Writer

The cracks in the old rafters' paint can easily be seen after entering the building. Seven newer championship banners hang from the rafters, weakly disguising the structure's antiquity.

Below, one can see the white lines in the bleached black tiles of the eight lanes as well as the racing flags extending across the floor, row after row.

The sounds — of the retort of the starting gun, arms cutting through the water, dull claps of the diving board, piercing whistles of encouragement, and applause after a winning time — give life to the building.

This life is the real Bowman Gray Pool, the home of meets, records and many UNC swimming and diving victories since January 1939. Last Friday's meet with South Carolina closed out a successful 46-year tradition for the Bowman Gray Pool as the home of the Tar Heel swimming and diving teams, which will move to the Student Activities Center for all competitive meets next season.

And although both the women and men's team lost, 81-58 and 59-54 respectively, Coach Frank Comfort said he thought it was a good way to end the Bowman Gray tradition.

"I think the last meet meant a lot more to me and Rich Deselm (asst. coach) because we've been around longer," Comfort said. "But, the men's meet was one of the best meets I've seen in a long time." Comfort said of the battle between the 18th-ranked Gamecocks and the unranked Tar Heels. "It was a good way to finish."

A good finish to a very long, successful history. Since the pool's construction in 1939, UNC men's teams have compiled a 346-118 record, won 11 Southern Conference championships, seven Atlantic Coast Conference titles and finished in the Top 20 at the NCAA Championships 16 times.

UNC women's teams have recorded an 80-12 dual-meet mark, won four ACC championships and finished in the nation's Top 10 nine times while calling Bowman Gray home for the past 11 years.

When it was first built, the pool was considered to be one of the nation's best, Comfort said, evidenced by its hosting of the 1949 and 1957 NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships. Even today, Bowman Gray "is still one of the fastest pools in the U.S.," Comfort said.

"It's a beautiful pool," he said. "As far as recruiting, it's the best old pool in the country."

But the recruiting pull of the pool, which attracted many of the nation's top swimmers in the '40s and '50s, started to fade away in the '60s, Comfort said. Although UNC has been able to get great women to swim here, many of the top men swimmers have chosen to attend school elsewhere because of the facilities, he said.

The new Olympic size pool in the SAC should provide UNC with one of the premiere facilities in the country.

But still, the pool has supplied many fond memories for Comfort, who is in his eighth season of coaching the UNC teams.

Two particular dual-meet wins over N.C. State in the Bowman Gray Pool stand out as highlights for Comfort. A February 1980 home triumph marked the first time that the Wolfpack men had lost an ACC dual-meet in 10 years. Similarly, a February 1982 win was the first time the UNC women had ever beaten the State swimmers.

COMPUTER SCIENCE, FINANCE AND BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION MAJORS

NCR's coming on campus... and we'd like to meet you

Attend our
CAREER RECEPTION
on
Tuesday, February 12
7:00-8:00 PM at
LENOIR HALL

A SPECIAL EVENT

Be our guest. Have some refreshments. Watch a presentation. Talk to our representatives one-on-one. Find out firsthand about the exciting NCR environment. And what it can do for your career.

A UNIQUE COMPANY

NCR stands out in the industry for many reasons. We're a $4.1 billion computer company with a history of a hundred years of steady growth and achievement, but we're also in step with today. Because we know where we're going, we know how to run our business. We've developed breakthrough products in every facet of information processing. From personal computers to powerful microcomputers for office automation and distributed data processing to mainframes.

A PROGRESSIVE CAREER

With us, you'll have the chance to see your ideas work, to use your initiative and to make decisions. Because our success depends upon you, we've created the finest development programs in the industry. The only limit to growth here is what you want and what you can do. And you'll like our management style... where your talents are recognized and your performance rewarded.

HIGH-VISIBILITY ROLES

We have challenging opportunities available in Software Development, Production and Inventory Control, Sales, Administrative Management and Financial Analysis. If you're a high achiever with lots of energy, determination and enthusiasm, position yourself for success with our innovative organization.

NCR will be interviewing on campus Wednesday, February 13. Contact your Placement Office for details. We'd like to see you informally first, so come to our reception. If you're unable to meet with us or schedule an interview, please send us your resume or letter of interest.

For opportunities in Software Development, Production and Inventory Control, write to: Mr. Gordon Davidson, Engineering & Manufacturing, NCR Corporation, 3325 Platt Springs Road, West Columbia, SC 29169.

For opportunities in Sales, Administrative Management and Financial Analysis, write to: Ms. Cheryl Snyder, USDPG, NCR Corporation, P.O. Box 31028, Raleigh, NC 27622.

Gymnastics team surpasses overall team record in William & Mary win

By BETH VELLIQUETTE
Staff Writer

For the past few weeks, whenever the members of the UNC women's gymnastics team worked out in the gym, they saw the number 175 on the wall. That was the number they wanted to reach to set a new school record for the all-around team score.

On Saturday night, before an overflow crowd at Fetzer Gymnasium, the team defeated William & Mary and broke the record with a score of 176.45. "We got tired of seeing the 175 on the wall," said senior co-captain Sue Tonietto.

Tonietto said that all week the women had adopted a philosophy of PMA—positive mental attitude.

In a sport like gymnastics, confidence and mental attitude is the key that leads to success, according to coach Derek Galvin. "Physically, they had the skills and talent to score at that level. What they had to do is allow themselves to do it mentally," Galvin said.

UNC began its drive toward 175 in the vaulting event as it took the first four places. Missy Shaffner won first with a score of 9.3 when she hit a difficult front handspring with a front somersault. Stacy Kaplan was second and Christine Thorne was third.

On the uneven parallel bars, UNC expanded its lead over William & Mary despite some uncharacteristic mistakes. "The girls missed things that I've never seen them do in practice. But then we had some excellent performances as well," Galvin said.

Christine Thorne was first in uneven parallel bars, followed by Lori Pepple of William & Mary and Tonietto of UNC.

Another school record was set in the balance beam event as the team scored 44.9. "Beam is the toughest event to compete in women's gymnastics. That's usually the event that decides whether you win or lose," Galvin said. "We're finally getting to the level on beam that I thought we should be all along."

Shaffner won the balance beam while Tammy Gilbert, Elizabeth Boulton and Kaplan tied for second.

The final event, floor exercise, was also dominated by the strong tumbling skills of UNC. First place went to Kaplan, second to Gilbert and third to Tonietto.

UNC's next goal is 177. "One of the teams in the region that is ahead of us is Kentucky," Galvin said. "They've scored 177 in each of their last two meets so in order to gain a higher seating in the NCAA, we have to pass them by. That's going to be a very tough task, but I think we're capable of doing it."
