

Blend of old, new should help women's track

By BOB YOUNG
Staff Writer

While the North Carolina men's track team may be relying on surprises at the ACC championships, the women's team will be putting its hopes in proven veterans and up-and-coming freshmen as it tries to repeat last year's second-place finish this week at N.C. State.

"Last year, we surprised a lot of people when we had the lead with four events remaining," coach Don Lockerbie said. "But it wasn't a surprise to us, because we knew we had the potential on paper to be where we were."

However, this year's squad has been depleted by graduation and injuries, losing the winners of five of the team's eight conference championships from last year. If this team is to put together a comparable showing this year, a lot of things will have to fall in place.

"I don't see any other outcome than Virginia running away with the team championship," Lockerbie said. "But after them, we have a shot at second, as do the teams from N.C. State and Maryland, both of which are very improved over last year. We're hoping for second, but third or even fourth looms darkly in the background."

UNC does have three returning conference champions, all of whom have a legitimate chance at repeating.

Felicia Carter was last year's long jump titleist and is the second all-time performer for the Tar Heels. She has not jumped farther than last year's 19-7 but has become more consistent this year and is ready for a big outing, Lockerbie said.

Senior Katy Lichota, defending discus champion and school record holder, will be throwing in her last ACC championship and should have no trouble winning the event one more time.

Shunta Robinson won the shot put last year but has been stale so far this year, Lockerbie said. He said he expected her to break out of her slump for the ACCs.

Lockerbie said he saw at least six other performers as having a realistic shot at placing high, if not winning their events.

Holly Murray, the Tar Heels' top cross-country runner from the fall, will be running in the 5,000 and should be the favorite to win, Lockerbie said.

Another Murray, Alisa, finished second in the conference in the 400 last year behind UNC's Kelly Houk and figures to be a threat this year, Lockerbie said, who is counting on her for a top-three finish.

In addition, two freshmen who were among the Top 10 high school performers in the nation in their events will play key roles for North Carolina.

Tauni Sanchez, a hurdler, has a chance to take the place vacated by Diane Thomas, who won the 100 hurdles last year but must sit out this season after transferring back to UNC from Maryland.

Jill Iritzarry, a heptathlete, may contend for the title in her event.

Lockerbie also is looking for good performances from sophomore Karol Chambers in the 3,000, freshman Vicki Verinder in the 1,500 and freshman Leah Ann Miller in the 800.

Men's team may surprise with a bag of track tricks

By BOB YOUNG
Staff Writer

When the ACC track and field championships begin at N.C. State this week, the men's team from North Carolina will show up with a few tricks up its sleeves. Surprise entrants, scrambled lineups and freshmen of influence should make the Tar Heels interesting to watch, although the team does not figure to come away with a team title.

"We could finish anywhere between third and fifth," coach Don Lockerbie said. "We're hoping for third, but to do that we're going to have to beat Maryland, something we've never been too successful at doing."

The competition for the men will start today with the first day of the decathlon, an event in which redshirt freshman Kevin McGorty will be favored to take either first or second. His chief competition should come from N.C. State's Fidelis Obikwu, the defending conference champion.

McGorty also might earn some points in the pole vault, an event in which he had the highest performance of any ACC vaulter. But that vault was made indoors, and he has yet to try the event outdoors this season.

Curt Sheaffer is the odds-on favorite to take the javelin. Sheaffer, a senior, won the event as a sophomore, finished third last year and said he was confident of recapturing the crown this year.

"I think the main competition should come from throwers from Duke and Clemson," Sheaffer said. "And you never know if my brother (Nate) will get off a good throw and surprise some people."

In the other field events, UNC will be hoping for some surprises from the football squad in order to get some extra points. Daryl Parham should be able to help Nate Sheaffer and Mel Landis in the discus, while Dennis Barron, Donnie Wallace and Tim Goad will try to continue the impressive job they did as shot putters during the indoor season. Randy Marriott, another football player, is in contention for the triple jump title, an event in which he had the second best performance in the conference indoors.

On the track, UNC's best bet for a title is steeplechaser Jack Morgan, who had the second best time in the ACC this year with an 8:55.

But after Morgan, the Tar Heels start with the surprises again.

George Nicholas will hope to capitalize on a somewhat weaker field in the 1,500 as he moves down from his usual distance of 5,000. He will be joined by Jim Farmer, who sat out the indoor season with an injury but performed well at the Appalachian State Invitational last weekend in Boone.

In other events, 800 runner David Fuhrmann, who had the second fastest time in the conference this year, will be joined by transfer Eric McManaman and freshman John Hussey. Rob Harrell will try to improve on last year's eighth-place finish in the 400. And hurdler Brent Walker, coming off a two-year injury, has a good chance at scoring in the 400 hurdles.

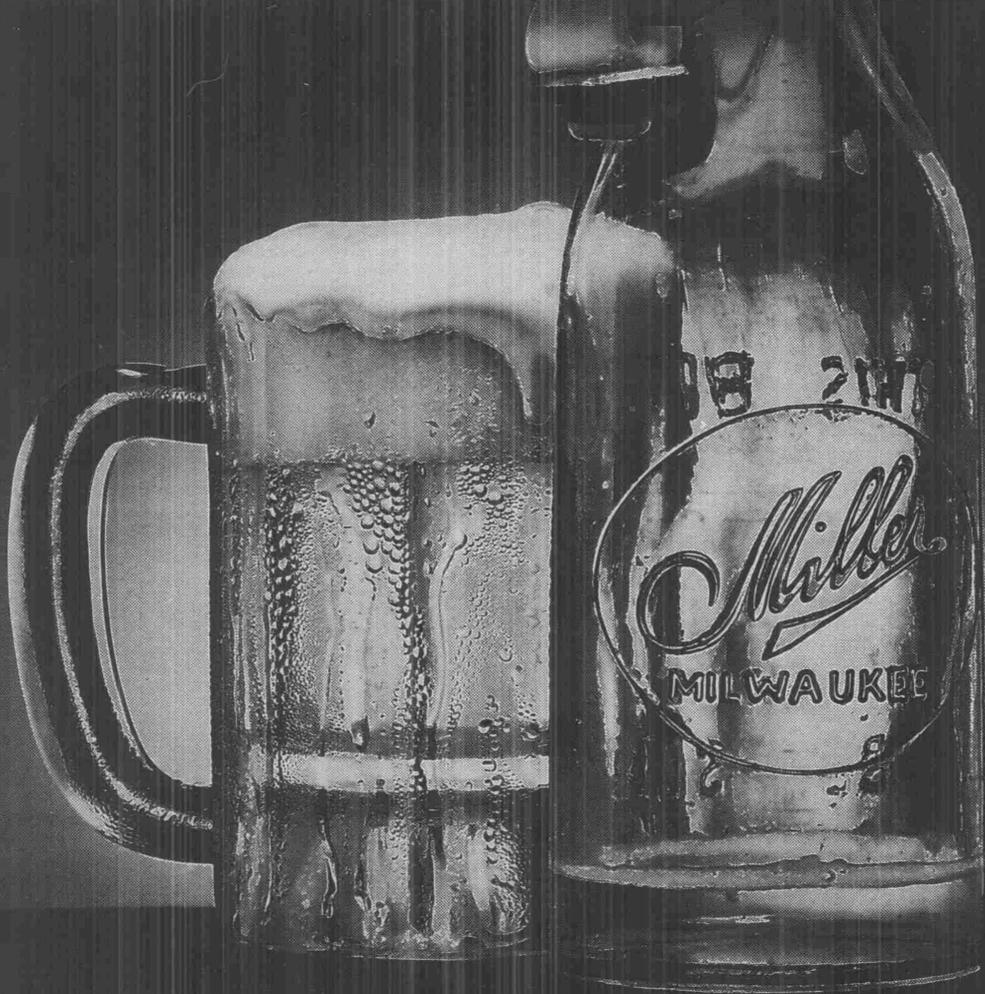

In the sprints, a couple of football players, including NCAA indoor qualifier Brad Sullivan and Earl Winfield, will be joined by basketball player Kenny Smith to try to turn around UNC's sprinting corps.

"Kenny did very well this weekend in Boone, running a 10.6 in the 100 after a very poor start," Lockerbie said. "And I think we can put together a 4 X 100 team that can finish in the top three and possibly qualify for the NCAAs, if not in this meet, surely later in the season."

The other relay, the 4 X 400, will be another strong event for the Tar Heels, who ran a time of 3:15 earlier this month at the Carolina-Duke Track Carnival.

OVER 100 YEARS AGO FREDERIC MILLER MADE A CLEAR COMMITMENT.

To Quality. To Purity.
To America.
And That Tradition Continues...

When Frederic Miller came to America from Germany, he wasn't much different from any other newcomer.

Like millions of others, he saw in America a golden opportunity—to bring his brewing skills to their peak, using the finest resources in the world.

Frederic Miller made the most of what America had to offer. He made the best beer he knew how to make, using the finest grains and hops; the purest water.

And to show America the quality and purity of his beer, he insisted on putting it in clear bottles.

A lot has changed since Frederic Miller's day. But a lot hasn't.

Miller still uses the finest ingredients and brewing skills. It contains no additives or preservatives.

And Miller still comes in the same clear bottles.

For the same clear reasons.

MADE THE AMERICAN WAY.

Get The Responsibility You've Earned.

After you get your degree, get management responsibility and immediate decision-making authority.

In a civilian job, it could take years. As a Navy officer, after 4 months of technical and leadership training, you're in charge with all the responsibility and respect you deserve.

The opportunities are as varied as today's technology: fields like electronics, engineering, inventory control and purchasing, personnel administration and systems analysis.

With the important responsibilities, comes an outstanding benefits package: 30 days' paid vacation earned each year, medical and dental care, low-cost life insurance and tax-free allowances.

The requirements are simple: you must have a BS or BA, meet all requirements, pass aptitude and physical examinations, qualify for security clearance and be a U.S. citizen.

If you're interested in this kind of responsibility, call the Naval Management Programs Office:
