

Heritage Week: history, art rolled into one

By LORETTA GRANTHAM
Assistant City Editor

Take an antiques show. Add a country fair, a Victorian garden party and a fashion show. Throw in a couple of art and fabric conservation programs.

You've created Heritage Week. "Preserving the Best of Our Past" is the theme of Heritage Week, an event coordinated by The Chapel Hill Preservation Society, The Chapel Hill Historical Society and The N.C. Art Society to raise funds for both historical preservation and art activities.

"The Chapel Hill Preservation Society antiques show has been held each year for 11 or 12 years," said Val

Lauder, a society member. "Heritage Week is a way to expand the show and really show the different aspects of our past ... it's an informal approach on looking back at things and enjoying them," she said.

Dr. William Chiego, chief curator at the N.C. Museum of Art, will open the five-day event at 4 p.m. Wednesday with a discussion titled "From Private Pleasure to Public Treasure" in the Morehead Building faculty lounge.

A country fair at Fearington, eight miles south of Chapel Hill on N.C. Highway 15-501, will be held from 5:30-8 p.m. Wednesday. Music, baked goods and a farmers' market will be part of the fair, an event to show how most people used to live in the country and take part in homemade entertainment, Lauder said.

A Victorian garden party featuring an "old fashions show" will begin at 4:30 p.m. Thursday at the Horace Williams House. Frances Frank Stone, show chairman, said about 30 different outfits, ranging from the Moravian dresses of the early 1800s to the embroidered garments of the 1930s, will be modeled.

"One of the nicest things (about the show) is that we have a number of Carolina students involved," Stone said, adding that WDMC radio station will provide historical music for the show.

Vintage clothes were donated by Playmakers Repertory Company, stores and people who heard about the show, she said.

Patrons, those who make a single donation of $25 for the week, will preview the antiques show Friday at 7 p.m. at the Carolina Inn. The public will be admitted from 8 to 10 p.m. Admission is $3 and must be paid only once throughout the three-day antiques show, said Helen Allen, event chairman.

"We planned Heritage Week in order to put more focus on the antiques show," she said, adding that the show is a major fund-raiser for the preservation society.

A fabric conservation program by Anne Tyrrell, formerly with the N.C. Museum of History, will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Horace Williams House. The antiques show at the Carolina Inn will be held from 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Dealers representing eight states will show wares ranging from small collectibles to higher-priced items. "We try to upgrade the quality and variety of the show every year," Allen said.

Lauder also mentioned the show's variety. "There'll be a varying degree of value from buttons to butter churns," she said.

The antiques show will be open from 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday. An auction of donated treasures will be held at 5 p.m. with Andy Park, WTVD-TV weatherman, as auctioneer.

Reagan, speaking in the square of the city where Truman began his political career, launched what aides called a month-long campaign with bipartisan appeal.
