Heard the latest N.C. State joke? Rivalry to be renewed Saturday

By TIM CROTHERS

Two engineering majors are jawing and catching some rays in "the brickyard".

Q: How many Carolina guys does it take to change a tire?

A: Two. One to buy the beer and one to call daddy!

Same day, two philosophy majors are engaging in an intellectual conversation and taking some sun in "the pit".

Q: How many State guys does it take to change a tire?

A: Only one, but he gets four hours credit for it!

It is the stuff great rivalries are made of. Jokes passed down from father to son, painted faces, pranks and almost always good football games. So, it may not be Michigan-Ohio State or Oklahoma-Texas and its outcome may not scramble the rankings in next week's AP football poll, but UNC vs. N.C. State still turns many a North Carolina head as the battle for the bragging rights along Highway 54.

"I don't think it (the rivalry) has dissipated. I do think the hate factor has come out of it," UNC coach Dick Crum said. "When I first came to Carolina, there was a lot of hatred involved, but fortunately that's all gone now."

"Sure it's a big game, for the rivalry itself if for no other reason." N.C. State coach Tom Reed said.

Moo U. and Preppy Hill will kick it off for the 75th time this Saturday at Carter-Finley Stadium, (12:10 p.m. WRAL-TV Ch.5), in a series that dates back to the Teddy Roosevelt regime.

The two team's seasons are apparently spiraling in opposite directions. N.C. State has lost three straight and has a record of 1-5 on the season, 1-2 in the ACC. The Tar Heels are coming off an impressive 34-14 win over Wake Forest, which jumped their season record to 3-2 and leveled their conference mark at 1-1. UNC has beaten State in their last six meetings, including a come-from-behind 28-21 victory last year in Chapel Hill on a William Humes touchdown with :31 remaining in the game.

N.C. State is led by junior college transfer quarterback Erik Kramer who has completed 109 of 206 passes for 1357 yards and eight touchdowns this season. Five of those scoring strikes ended up in the arms of senior Phil Brothers, who leads the team with 22 catches and is closing in on several Wolfpack receiving records.

Vince Evans and Rickey Isom line up behind Kramer. Evans leads the Pack with 461 yards rushing, but the Wolfpack ground attack has disappeared recently, accounting for only 43 yards over the past two games.

On defense, State inside linebacker Kelvin Crooms, who was a reserve fullback until last year, leads the team with 84 tackles. But Crooms can only plug one hole in the State's swiss cheese defense. The Wolfpack is last in the ACC in total defense, rushing defense and scoring defense having allowed over 29 points per game.

football picks of the week

Why are we coming at you a day early this week? Some have suggested we were so darned proud of our picks we couldn't wait another day. Others say we're just so dazed by Jack Clark's home run yesterday we didn't know what day it was. Facts are that we aren't publishing Friday because we knew you'd all blow town early for Fall Break anyway.

"Low Key" Lee Roberts, after some rough early going, is starting to show people why he's sports editor (you sure can't tell by his writing style). Last week

Lee compiled a picks of the week record mark of 9-1, and most people in the know say Lee's picks are the picks to pick. Or something like that.

Scott "Scoots" Fowler is precariously holding on to his season lead by one game over Roberts and insiders say he's bought plane tickets to Toledo in case he screws up this week.

Tim "The Mother" Crothers, after a fast rookie start, is beginning to make the kinds of mistakes youngsters will inevitably make over the pressure of a long season. It was good while it lasted.

Soccer teams to play

For those of us sticking around the Chapel Hill area over the long Fall Break weekend, Sunday afternoon should provide a double dose of good soccer.

At 12 the women's team plays Cincinnati on Fetzer Field as they try to start a new unbeaten streak after recently being shut out for the first time in the program's history. The men's team will battle Maryland immediately following that game at 2 in an ACC conference clash. As an added incentive to attend the games, the Carolina Athletic Association is offering door prizes for some lucky fans.

The volleyball team will also be in action over the break, going to Richmond, Ky. to compete in the Eastern Kentucky Invitational.
