

Greene for SBP

To the editors:
We are writing this letter to express our support for Jimmy Greene, candidate for student body president. Jimmy is an experienced and enthusiastic candidate. He has served for nearly two years on the Campus Governing Council and is currently speaker of the CGG. While on the CGC, Jimmy has been one who has been there when needed. He has been a fair and hard-working member of the CGC and is supported by several members of the council.

Jimmy also has served for the past year as chairman of the CGC committee on campus security. As chairman, he initiated and organized the Campus

Watch program. He also worked with the administration to increase the lighting in several areas on campus.

As one can see, Jimmy has had invaluable experience in Student Government. This experience has given him the knowledge of the system and what makes it work best. Jimmy's experience makes him qualified to hold the office of student body president. Vote Jimmy Greene for student body president!

Zemp for SBP

To the editors:

Once again, the time has come for students to choose their leaders for the coming year. It seems that the problems facing the candidates this year are the same ones that surfaced in last year's election: the mandatory meal plan/food service, parking, divestment and student empowerment. It is time to elect a leader who has solutions, someone who can get things done. Jack Zemp is such a candidate.

Jack Zemp has answers and concrete solutions to these problems. He has plans of bringing competition into the campus food service. He has developed parking solutions and ways to fund them. Zemp is aware of off-campus student problems, textbook prices and campus security problems. He has the determination to give students their rightful voice on campus.

Jack Zemp is the man who can get things accomplished. He is not one of the Suite C politicians who have brought us the current atmosphere of student helplessness. The student body of this University cannot afford another press-chosen friend of the administration. The students of this University deserve someone who can get things done. The students of this University need Jack Zemp.

Brady for SBP

To the editors:

As a concerned student of this campus, I would like to voice my opinion on the race for the student body presidency. I would like to express my support for one of candidates, David Brady.

David is the only candidate that has visited every dorm and has knocked on every door on this campus. He has done this because he is greatly concerned with maintaining close contact with the students themselves. In his mind, if the Student Government does not exist to serve the needs of the student body, then it should not exist at all.

For that very reason, David plans to initiate a weekly article in the DTH to report relevant news concerning the activities of the Executive Committee and the Student Government to the student body.

David has tremendous experience with the Student Government. He was in the Campus Governing Council and was appointed to the position of finance committee chairman. As chairman, David had to perform the mammoth task of allocating nearly half a million dollars to various student organizations, and, as far as I could tell, he did an excellent job.

David's knowledge of the intricacies of this campus is superb. He knows all the people who are involved with the Student Government and many of the school administrators who formulate the policies that affect the student body.

And finally, but most importantly, David is truly dedicated to us, the students. He knows the needs and problems that concern the average student. For example, he knows of the incredible problems students have with parking on campus and has suggested a solution for it that may not be completed during his administration but would eventually alleviate the problem. He proposes to build a parking deck in South Campus or near the Bell Tower that would provide many more parking spaces for the students. He also realizes that there is a problem of high textbook costs and proposes the minimum-use textbook policy, which would require professors to use textbooks for at least two semesters and therefore allow students to sell their textbooks.

David is truly dedicated to the student body, and I know without a doubt that he is the most qualified of all the candidates.

Longest for SBP

To the editors:

This year, many students have complained that there is no way to tell the difference between candidates for student body president. While it is true that many of the candidates take the same stands on the issues, only one candidate, Ryke Longest, stands out through his involvement in Student Government, having worked in various capacities under three student body presidents.

This makes him different because he has on-the-job training. Working as student body treasurer, he had to train and supervise the working of treasurers for the Student Government-funded groups. This involvement took him 20-30 hours per week of work and trained him in how to supervise people and work with administrators.

He has also proved himself as a candidate who makes students aware of problems. As a CGC member from Morrison and Hinton James, he introduced the first bill in last year's session to call attention to the implementation of the mandatory meal plan. By being the first to direct attention to the issue, he started the presidential candidates talking about the issue.

Ryke is concerned about the conversion of dormitories into office space.

This is another issue that he wanted to raise public awareness about while there is still time to change opinions at the administration level about it. Other candidates have not addressed this issue. They do not see the importance of fighting on issues that won't affect the campus for three or four years. That is the attitude that allowed the mandatory meal plan to be put in place. The administration does its decision-making 5-10 years in advance on many issues. It's time that the student body president start doing the same thing.

Ryke has proved his concern for student issues through his long service in Student Government. Since his freshman year, he has been fighting against those who would ignore student input. His experience has taught him the tactics and given him the tools to fight most effectively for student input.

In campaigning for Ryke, it has been brought to my attention that he is not the "cutest" candidate. I will not challenge this conclusion, but I question whether we need a cute presidency. For this reason, I'm voting for Ryke.

Write in Jarvis/Broadway

To the editors:

Ever since my freshman year here at Carolina, I have been looking forward to participating in Senior Class activities. Now my first chance to do so comes in the form of voting for our class officers. Although there will be no candidates on the ballot for the offices of Senior Class secretary and treasurer, there are two noteworthy students running a write-in campaign for these offices.

Jackie Jarvis is running for the position of Senior Class secretary, and Patrick Broadway is seeking to fill the role of treasurer. I have known both Jackie and Patrick in and out of class for almost three years. They were both involved in dorm government, worked as Orientation counselors, and have been members of various social and service organizations on campus. Jackie and Patrick are two of the most innovative, hard-working, determined people I know. They dedicate themselves fully to any project they become involved with and will do their best to make it work. Having a strong love for Carolina, Jackie and Patrick are willing to do their utmost to make next year our best year yet.

Show your concern for our Senior Class and write in Jackie Jarvis for Senior Class secretary and Patrick Broadway for treasurer.

Jones for RHA

To the editors:

The Residence Hall Association has done too little for too long. Should we put the same people back in? Isn't it time to elect someone with the backbone to make RHA responsive to students, not just Housing? It takes more than just ideas; it takes a president who has proved his leadership and ability.

Ray Jones has the ideas and the answers and the solutions. As president of Avery dorm, he led the kind of government that made a difference in residents' lives. As RHA president, he will see that RHA is not a puppet of Housing but will answer to students for a change.

Do you want your room rent to go up again? Ray Jones doesn't.

Do you want better lighting on South Campus? Ray Jones does.

Do you want student parking moved out to fringe lots? Ray Jones doesn't.

Do you feel like seeing another year of an unproductive RHA?

Ray Jones is ready to put RHA to work. If you want to see these ideas in action, put Ray Jones in action as RHA president. The time for change is now.

Hassel for SBP

To the editors:

Now that students have demonstrated this semester a concern for re-establishing a voice for themselves on campus, there is no better time to elect Bryan Hassel for student body president. Bryan has the clearest focus on the changes that must be made to make Suite C an effective and representative organization. The foundation of his campaign is based on action, research and realities which best demonstrates, above and beyond his opponents, a pure vision of why Student Government exists: to be the students' advocate, first and foremost.

Bryan cares about students and the rights of students. His experience is not in Student Government directly; consequently, he does not have a "Suite C" mentality that is often associated with career student politicians. He was a mustang in the coordination of a three-school lobby against the raising of the drinking age. Of all the presidential candidates, he was the only one to have helped lead the successful Campus Y reinstatement campaign. Bryan understands the issues, knows the direction, and has the leadership and dynamics to make things happen.

We have a choice to make today on how our Student Government will be run. With a vote for the career politician, we will get the status quo — which is OK, but nothing new. With a vote for Bryan Hassel, we will get a student body president who has made a career out of fighting for students' rights, rather than one who has begun to talk about them now that we are nearing election time. Vote today and empower students to make choices for themselves. Cast an educated vote for Bryan Hassel, a student's student body president.

Brady for SBP

To the editors:

In my almost five years as a member of the student body, I have witnessed much on this campus. I have come into contact with many people who have impressed upon me a keen sense of justice, representation and energy with regard to student action and participation. None have captured my attention and confidence as much as student body president candidate David Brady.

Campus politics aside, I can verily say that no one has been more directly involved with, concerned about and responsive to the common student's needs as David Brady has been. It is a difficult choice we must make in this election due to the crowded field of very commendable and deserving candidates, but remember that one alone can claim the unparalleled possessions of extensive experience, innovative ideas and commitment to equity. That "one" is David Brady.

To pass up the opportunity to have this bright student statesman lead the student body would be deplorable. I urge you to cast your ballot with good conscience, for a good cause, for David Brady. Thank you.

Hassel for SBP

To the editors:

In the past two years, I have given much thought to the concept of Student Government at UNC, its nature, its purpose and how it can be more effective. The end result of my thinking and discussions with many different people is that for Student Government to realize its full potential and to have a real impact on this campus, it is absolutely imperative to have a strong, capable student body president.

I am personally acquainted with all of the candidates for SBP. Although all of them have their strong points, one candidate clearly stands alone above the rest. Bryan Hassel is that candidate.

Bryan epitomizes the qualities it takes to make a good, even great, SBP. He has intelligence, insight, integrity, concern and organizational ability that he has shown over and over through his involvement in Student Government and other campus organizations.

Almost more important than experience in the executive branch, Bryan possesses a streak of stubbornness, which is vital for dealing with a sometimes hostile and intransigent administration.

Bryan has included in his platform concern about the mandatory meal plan, support for the UNC Drug and Alcohol Outreach programs and ensuring the students' voice is heard in issues affecting them. Bryan has worked closely with me on these issues for the past year. They are real concerns that he has given much time to and will continue to do so long past the election.

I endorse Bryan Hassel for student body president in the strongest terms, and I urge you, the students — for a strong, effective Student Government — to elect Bryan Hassel as your student body president.

Venable/Killough for seniors

To the editors:

We believe that the RHA should not show favoritism toward candidates for Senior Class president/vice president. However, since Don Courtney and Jane Miskavage find it necessary to solicit endorsements from selected Governing Board members, we feel compelled to express our support for David Venable and Michele Killough.

Throughout their campaign, Venable and Killough have shown their firm knowledge of issues concerning both the present and rising senior classes. The information they presented on topics such as senior preregistration priority, the class gift and the class trip has been consistently accurate. In fact, to our knowledge, they have yet to retract a single statement because of misinformation. (We wish this were true for their opponents.)

Another key factor in this team's qualification for president/vice president is Venable's strong record of leadership at UNC. As governor of Morehead Residence College, Venable has helped create, organize and carry out successful programs and events for area residents. This experience will prove invaluable when addressing the needs and ideas of thousands of seniors next year.

These reasons notwithstanding, the integrity alone of the Venable/Killough campaign is sufficient to justify their election. They have limited their forum discussions to matters concerning the Senior Class — not stooping to deliver personal attacks against their opponents. In addition, they have expressed enthusiasm for including the entire class in developing proposals for class projects. They have not attempted to create a pat, soft-sell platform based on a few preselected topics (e.g., new bells in the Bell Tower).

Venable and Killough did not approach us for his letter; we wrote it out of our own initiative, and it does not constitute an official RHA endorsement. But we recommend the Venable/Killough team for Senior Class president/vice president with the highest level of confidence.

Zook for 'DTH'

To the editors:

The importance and respect conferred on the position of Daily Tar Heel editor is evident to all at this University. In support of this claim, one might simply note that its candidates are allowed campaign budgets exceeding those of all others except student body president. Its significance is also manifest in the number of students it affects: The DTH is the most widely distributed source of news and forum for ideas on campus. The responsibility is obviously a great one, and as informed and concerned students, we feel that Jim Zook is the obvious choice for DTH editor. We reached this decision because we recognize that Jim possesses attributes that combine the past, present and future to provide the best candidate for DTH editor: experience, dedication to excellence and vision.

Jim Zook has experience. He is a junior who has worked with the DTH since his freshman year; the Arkansas Gazette, summer of 1985; Newsweek On Campus, April 1984 to the present; and the University News Bureau, August 1983 to the present.

Jim Zook is dedicated to excellence. Merely cranking out a newspaper day after day is not his objective for the DTH. Jim wants the students of UNC to read a coherent, progressive newspaper that informs students not only of campus news, but also of broader, far-reaching issues that affect us as young adults. This is evident in Jim's campaign commitments to increase state and national news and to begin regular meetings with Journalism School faculty for educated insight in producing a high-caliber product.

Jim Zook has vision. Recognizing that UNC has one of the most reputable schools of journalism in the nation and that, correspondingly, the DTH is very well respected among college newspapers, Jim has specific goals designed to uphold this prestige. One of the keys to this is assuring that the paper is an efficient business operation, providing the paper with a sound financial base on which to build successful papers long after he has left.

The DTH has a great responsibility to the students of UNC. In turn, we have the responsibility of selecting a capable editor who will best serve our interests. As students concerned about the quality and direction of the DTH, we support Jim Zook for editor.
