Supreme Court upholds Georgia sodomy law 5-4

From Associated Press reports

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, upholding a Georgia sodomy law by a 5-4 vote, ruled Monday that consenting adults have no constitutional right to private homosexual conduct.

The ruling was limited to "consensual homosexual sodomy." But nothing in its sweeping language cast doubt on the constitutionality of state laws that also make heterosexual sodomy a crime, even when performed by married couples.

"The proposition that any kind of private sexual conduct between consenting adults is constitutionally insulated from state proscription is unsupportable," Justice Byrom R. White wrote for the court.

The Georgia law, which White said is similar to those in half the states, defines sodomy as "any sexual act involving the sex organ of one person and the mouth or anus of another."

The court refused to recognize private homosexual conduct as a "fundamental right" deserving of the Constitution's fullest protection.

The court previously ruled that decisions to marry, have children, practice birth control or have an abortion are such fundamental rights.

"We think it evident that none of the rights announced in those cases bear any resemblance to the claimed constitutional right of homosexuals to engage in the acts of sodomy," White said.

The Georgia law was challenged by Michael Hardwick, an Atlanta bartender and homosexual who was arrested in 1982 for allegedly committing sodomy in his home. He never has been prosecuted under the law, which carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

The arresting officer had gone to Hardwick's home to issue a warrant in another case and was told he could find him in his bedroom.

Hardwick sued Georgia officials in 1983, seeking to have the law declared unconstitutional. He had won in the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, but that ruling was reversed Monday.

"Plainly enough, otherwise illegal conduct is not always immunized whenever it occurs in the home,"

White said. "It would be difficult... to limit the claimed right of homosexual conduct while leaving exposed to prosecution adultery, incest and other sexual crimes even though they are committed in the home."

The court swept aside arguments that the Georgia law has no rational basis without explicitly ruling that it is rational.

"Law is constantly based on notions of morality," White said, "and if all laws representing essentially moral choices are to be invalidated... the courts will be very busy indeed."

Man dies in fire on balcony

From Associated Press reports

LATROBE, Pa. — A 66-year-old man burned to death on the second floor of a residential hotel despite the coaxing of firefighters who stood ready to catch him only 10 feet below.

"He was standing out on the balcony. His clothes were on fire, and he was being burned by the fire coming out of the window, but he refused to jump in our arms. We had to wait until the ladders arrived to go up and get him," said fire Chief John Orzechowski.

Adam Aukerman died Sunday night, and Michael Krawtz, 69, another tenant of the McHenry Hotel, was in critical condition Monday at West Penn Hospital in Pittsburgh, authorities said. Three firefighters were treated for smoke inhalation.

The cause of the fire was not immediately determined, Orzechowski said.

Come write for the Heel

The Summer Tar Heel needs writers, copy editors and people to help with typing wire copy and other items into the computer. You do not have to be a journalism major, but you have to be pretty dependable. If you feel the slightest bit interested, please come by the plush Tar Heel offices in the Union and ask for Jo or Jill or call at 962-0245. Story assignments are made at a staff meeting at 3 p.m. every Thursday, so that would be a good time for interested parties to drop by.
