

The Pit

From about 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day, the Pit is the place to be between classes. Bordered by Lenoir Hall, the Student Union, the Student Stores and the Undergraduate Library, this open-air assembly is a popular meeting place for students throughout the day.

During the warmer months, the entrenched area becomes a stage where students can hear speeches from campus groups on the latest controversy, or maybe listen to their favorite evangelist preach the words of wisdom.

"Pit sitting" has become a noted phenomenon on the UNC campus, with some students actually skipping class to enjoy a can of soda and the paper while sitting in the sun. Experience has it that if you sit in the Pit all day, you can see everyone you know at least once.

Tar Heel/John deVille

The Walter Royal Davis Library

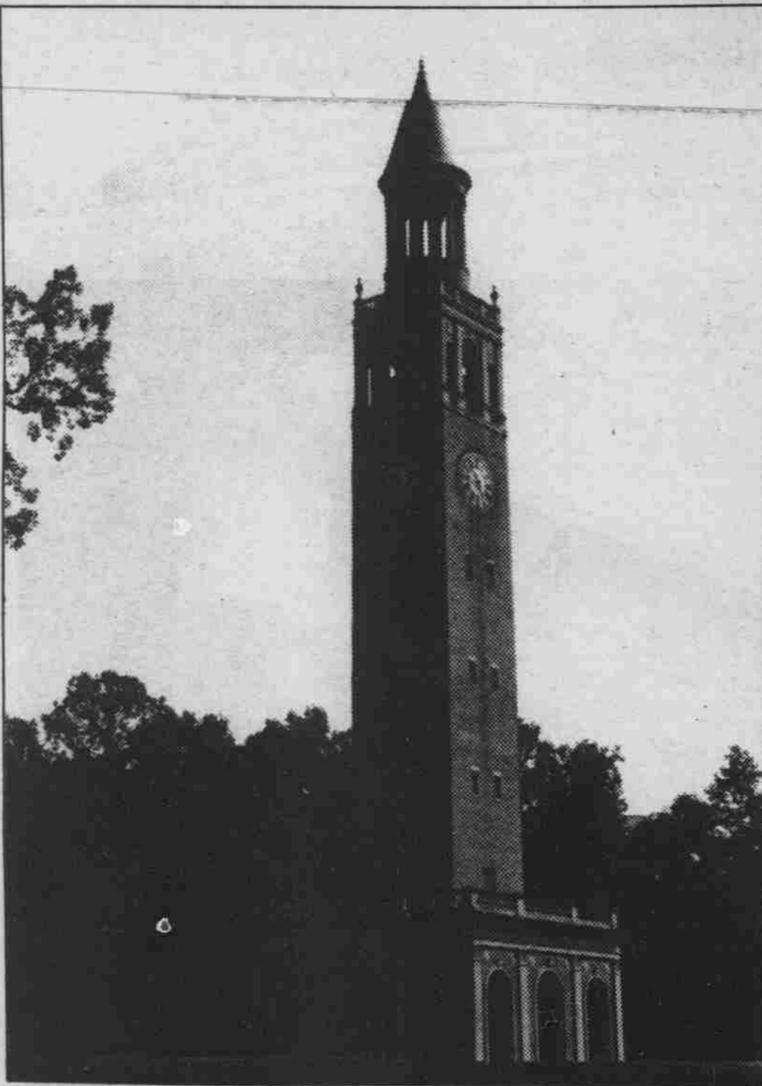

Designed by two award-winning architects, the Walter Royal Davis Library is the largest educational building in North Carolina.

This $22.9 million library, which is often considered a more serious place to study than the Undergraduate "Zoo," has 10 acres of floor space over nine levels on a three-acre site.

Davis has a total seating capacity of 3,013 and a capacity of 1.8 million volumes.

The library includes several ingenious design features. One of the most striking features is a large main gallery hung with colorful banners showing historic printer's marks represented in the Rare Book Collection.

The building was named for Walter Royal Davis, a Texas businessman with family roots in Elizabeth City, N.C. He was a member of the Board of Trustees for eight years and he fought in the state legislature to claim for Chapel Hill the major portion of funds received from the sale of University utilities.

Tar Heel/John deVille

The Morehead-Patterson Bell Tower

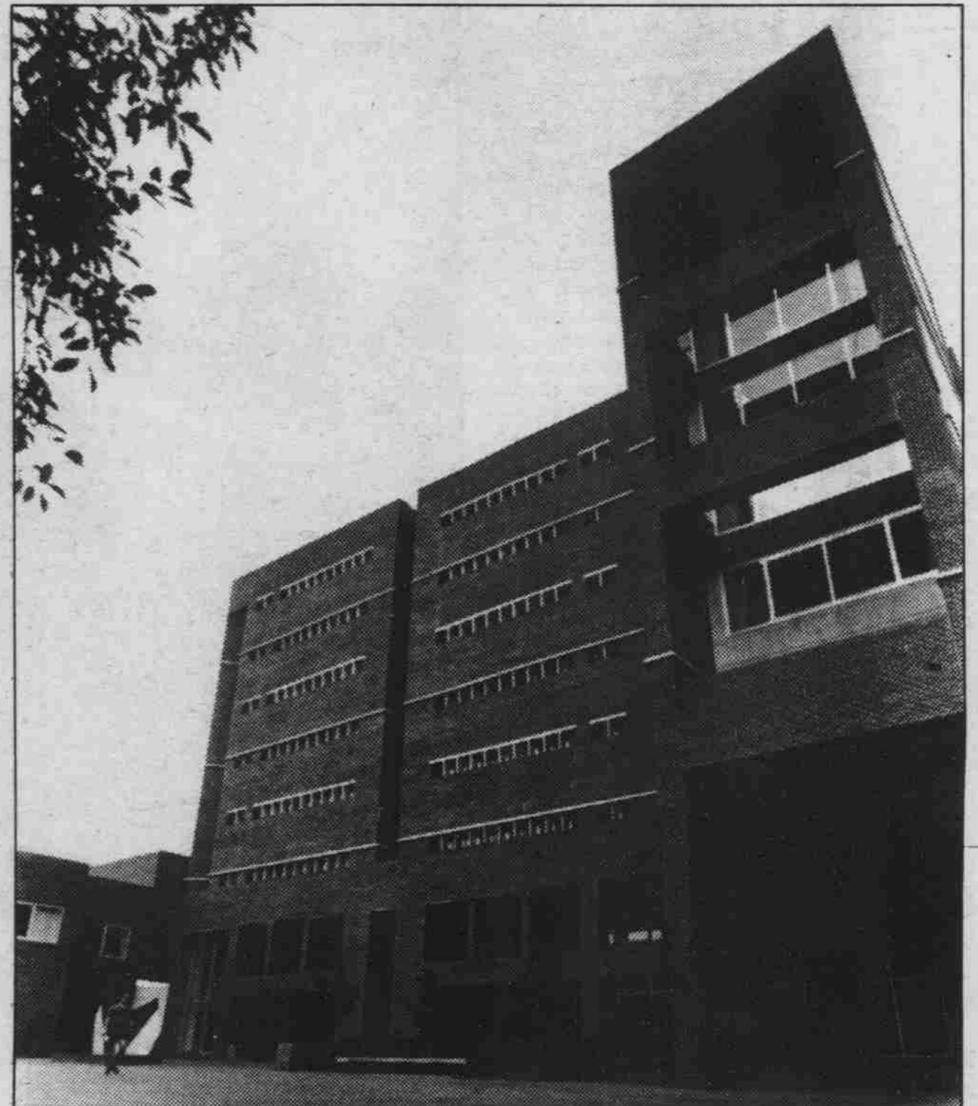

The Morehead-Patterson Bell Tower is soon known to all University students as it rings several times a day to call students to classes, provides twilight music and also adds a special touch to the departing crowds after a football game.

The Bell Tower was a $100,000 gift given by John Motley Morehead, class of 1891, and Rufus Lenoir Patterson, class of 1893, to honor members of their families who had been associated with the University throughout its entire history. Presently 16 Moreheads and 11 Pattersons are commemorated on the tablets beneath the arcade.

One rumor has it that Morehead was jealous of the fact that the library was to be named after Louis Round Wilson, so the bell tower was placed in such a way that when looking back on Wilson from the flag pole in front of South Building, a dunce cap sits on top of the Wilson dome.

The Bell Tower first rang in November 1931 and is located south of Wilson Library. Not only is it visible for several miles, but it is occasionally audible as far as Durham.

Tar Heel/John deVille