

Try tolerance, but if it's impossible you can swap

For students who are not satisfied with their residence situation, there is hope. University Housing provides a means of room changes for those who find themselves having serious problems in their dormitory situations.

According to Jan Weaver of University Housing, the procedure for room changes is outlined in the housing booklet.

"There are two options," Weaver said. "One is a direct room swap in the dormitory. The other is to go to the area director's office and pick up a form called the 'Room/Area Change Application Form.'"

The form allows the student to move not only from one room to another room, but also from one residence area to another.

According to the Housing Contract Book for Undergraduates, "Hallways and Highrises," room change rules for the 1986-1987 academic year are "after receiving an assignment, a change will not be made without just cause.

"Room changes will be considered beginning two weeks after the day the halls open. These changes are usually limited to direct room swaps, and all concerned parties must agree to the change. Room changes may not be made without the area director's approval. Students not satisfied with their room (hall) assignment may apply to their Area Director for a hall change on or after Aug. 2, 1986, and request to be placed on waiting list for that hall," according to the Housing Contract Book.

The Housing Contract Book continues to state that after the "Room Area Change Application Form" has been completed "the Housing Department will conduct a drawing Sept. 8, 1986, to determine the position on the waiting list, and will begin using the waiting list after all in-area problems and crowding have been relieved."

Auditions to be held

Raleigh Little Theatre will hold auditions for the musical "Once Upon A Mattress" on July 21 and 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the Theatre on Pogue Street. Call 821-4579 for details.
