Field hockey beats top teams

By defeating two Top-10 opponents on AstroTurf field this weekend, North Carolina's second-ranked field hockey team upped its record, increased its momentum, and staked a strong claim for the No. 1 spot.

After beating Iowa 4-1 on Friday, freshman forward Julie Blaisse scored two goals Sunday afternoon to lead the Tar Heels to a 3-1 victory over last year's national runner-up, Old Dominion, in the most emotional game of the season thus far.

Despite the final result, North Carolina coach Karen Shelton had mixed feelings about her team's Sunday performance, which lifted her squad's record to 4-1.

"We had spurts when we played well, but at times we let down defensively," she said. "We need to draw more penalty corners and take advantage of them. We only had four penalty corners as opposed to Old Dominion's 10."

The ball alternated territories for most of the first half until junior forward Maryellen Falcone drove it from the left wing past ODU goalkeeper Shelley Behrens.

With 2:45 left before intermission, Tracey Yurgin took a UNC penalty corner and passed to Lori Bruney who set the shot for Blaisse. Characteristically, North Carolina's Dutch import knocked it home for a 2-0 Tar Heel lead.

ODU failed to capitalize on four penalty corners and took four unsuccessful shots within the circle. In its last attempt to score before the half, sophomore Jill Fisher was shut down by North Carolina back Ellen Bakken.

Old Dominion played more aggressively early in the second half. Less than eight minutes in, ODU senior Stelly Seltman slapped an assist from co-captain Jackie Grady beyond the reach of lunging goalkeeper Kathy Mulvey.

Shortly thereafter, UNC's key midfielder, Leslie Lyness, reinjured ligaments in her right shoulder and was forced to leave the game. Freshman Kathy Staley effectively replaced her and within minutes Blaisse restored the Tar Heel's two-point lead with her second goal.

Despite six more penalty corners and the skill of junior Cathy Large, the Monarchs failed to score again before the second-half buzzer that signalled a UNC victory.

Shelton had positive words for Mulvey, a junior in her first season as starting goalkeeper. "Kathy was really tested in this game. She did a nice job and kept it out of the cage. Every time she fielded the ball, it was good experience for her."

In Friday afternoon's win against the sixth-ranked Hawkeyes, Bruney was a force to be reckoned with. The junior midfielder scored to break a 1-1 tie after having assisted UNC's first goal, by Blaisse, just two minutes in.

Iowa forward Michelle Murgatroyd evened the score by slapping in a loose ball with 19:14 remaining in the half. Seven minutes later, UNC recaptured the lead when Bruney lunged for senior forward Claire Dougherty's pass to make the score 2-1.

In the second half, the defensive pressure of Lyness and back Jennifer Anderson prevented Iowa from scoring again. Meanwhile, goals by Falcone and junior Annemarie Rosenbaum accounted for the final score.

Next for the Tar Heels is a trip to Temple University in Philadelphia, Sept. 27-28, for a weekend doubleheader with the host Owls and the University of the Pacific.

Crum injury requires cast for 6 weeks

By BOB YOUNG

UNC football coach Dick Crum fractured his lower right leg when he was caught napping by Tar Heel running back Derrick Fenner near the end of the first half of the UNC-Florida State game in Tallahassee, according to a team doctor.

The injury occurred in the final two minutes of the second quarter when Florida State linebacker Fred Jones shoved Fenner out of a pass route and into the sidelines. Crum was watching quarterback Jonathan Hall scrambling back upfield and did not see Fenner until the 6-foot-4, 222-pound sophomore had collided with him.

"It was just a sideline hazard," Crum said. "They were coming my way. Normally you can just jump in the air and they carry you along with them. I guess I didn't get up in the air high enough today."

Dr. Timothy Taft, a UNC orthopedic surgeon, examined Crum late Saturday night. "Dick has a non-displaced fracture of his lateral tibial plateau," he said Sunday.

And we all know how painful that can be . . .

Less-anatomically speaking, Crum has a broken right shinbone and the fracture extends upward into the knee joint. Taft found no cartilage or ligament damage.

Crum will be in a cast for approximately six weeks. He will probably be on crutches for two weeks after the cast comes off.

With Crum sitting on the bench, the UNC play-calling duties for the second half of the game were handled by offensive coordinator Randy Walker, who called in the plays from the press box to wide receiver coach Bobby Elliott. Elliott passed them along to Hall, who relayed them to quarterback Mark Maye on the field. Normally, Crum signals in the plays.

"When you're sitting back there like that," Crum said, "you've got to let the coordinators run the ball game. I could talk to them between series, but we just discussed strategy. I really didn't have much to do with what went on in the second half."

Soccer teams win

By EDDY LANDRETH

It was a Carolina Sunday in Fairfax, Va., as the men's and women's soccer teams left the Patriot Invitational at George Mason University with victories.

The women defeated second ranked and defending national champion George Mason 4-2. The men took American University 1-0.

On Saturday, the women defeated fourth-ranked William and Mary 5-1. The men, however, did not fare as well on Friday, losing to George Mason 5-3.

In the women's game Sunday, George Mason took a 2-1 half-time lead. In the second half, UNC outscored the Lady Patriots 3-0. April Heinrichs led UNC in scoring with two goals.
