

Sanford TV ads critical of Broyhill

From Associated Press reports

Former Governor Terry Sanford on Wednesday launched the first of a series of attacks on Sen. Jim Broyhill's voting record, but he denied taking a negative approach to the U.S. Senate race.

"We're going to talk about his record for old people. We're going to talk about his record for farmers. We're going to talk about him totally striking out when it came to doing something worthwhile for the textile workers," Sanford said at a news conference.

"But I'm going to talk about it in terms of comparisons," he added. "I'm not out to attack him. I never did start out to attack him. I never did really want to see that kind of campaign."

Sanford, a Democrat, focused on education Wednesday, saying the issue had been raised when Broyhill ran television ads criticizing Sanford's backing of a food tax while he was governor. He said the tax paved the way for widespread education improvements in North Carolina.

"The whiny woman in his TV ad may not forgive me for supporting schools, but there are more than a million North Carolina people of all ages that will take a different view; they went to one of the community colleges and institutes," Sanford said. "These institutions would not be in place all over North Carolina . . . (without) the school tax." Sanford said Broyhill, as a congressman, consistently voted against a federal commitment to education. "In 1982, James Broyhill was one of only 19 congressmen to oppose a bill protecting college aid programs and restoring student aid grants to certain veterans," Sanford said.

Doug Haynes, communications director for the Broyhill campaign, said Broyhill "has a very strong record of supporting higher quality education for people in our schools."

"He advocates a back-to-the-basics approach involving parents and communities in the education of our children," Haynes said. "He really believes that the people who know the problems in education best are at the state and local level. The federal government's role should be to help students who are disadvantaged and needy, to set high goals and reward achievement."

Sanford said he was not moving to the attack, but said "I am going to be standing on the high ground, repelling the attacks."

"I think that a campaign has to be a series of comparisons, but have always said comparisons should be out front, should be scrupulously honest," he said.

He also chided Broyhill for not holding news conferences and for hiding behind short television ads.

Reagan tries to hold ground in anti-sanctions lobbying

From Associated Press reports

WASHINGTON — President Reagan lobbied senators by telephone Wednesday in a final push to preserve his veto of sanctions aimed at pressuring the South African government to abandon the system of apartheid.

The Senate was set to decide the issue Thursday, with most vote counts showing that Reagan lacks the margin he needs to prevent his veto from being overridden, as it was in the House earlier this week.

Overriding a presidential veto requires two-thirds of senators present and voting.

Secretary of State George Schultz maintained that the sanctions legislation would increase joblessness among South African blacks. He said Tuesday that if senators choose to override the Reagan veto they will weaken the president's bargaining position with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, when the pair meets in Iceland in less than two weeks.

Miners hold one-day strike

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — About 325,000 black miners stayed away from work Wednesday to mourn 177 workers killed in a gold mine fire, union officials said. It was the largest protest ever among the nation's nearly 600,000 black miners.

The Chamber of Mines, the

State & National

industry organization, called for whistles to be blown at noon followed by five minutes of silence in 100 mines nationwide to commemorate those killed in a Sept. 16 underground fire in the General Mining Union Corp.'s Kinross gold mine.

But the National Union of Mine-workers, which claims 250,000 members, called for an all-day strike. The union's general secretary, Cyril Ramaphosa, said about 325,000 black miners joined in the protest.

Rainfall floods the Midwest

More rain fell Wednesday across the Midwest and Plains, where flooding has left more than 3,500 people homeless, and Oklahoma's National Guard was asked to help in one county where "some people are cut off and trapped."

A partially ruptured dam in Wisconsin remained standing but leaking, and hundreds were believed still away from their homes in flooded northeastern Montana.

One man died Wednesday when his car was swept off a bridge in Oklahoma, and another was missing and presumed dead in Illinois. One person died last week in Montana.

Broyhill camp pins hopes on Reagan visit

From Associated Press reports

RALEIGH — President Reagan's visit to North Carolina, scheduled for Oct. 8, will give a boost to the U.S. Senate campaign of Republican Jim Broyhill as the race heads into its final month, a Broyhill spokesman said.

"The people of North Carolina overwhelmingly supported the president in 1980 and 1984," Broyhill spokesman Doug Haynes said Tuesday. "We think (the visits) will be a positive factor, especially in eastern North Carolina where there are so many conservative voters."

But a poll conducted for the Raleigh News and Observer and the Winston-Salem Journal indicated that Reagan was not having a major impact on the race. It found that 21 percent of all respondents were more likely to vote for Broyhill because Reagan favors him, 18 percent said they were less likely, and 55 percent said it made no difference.

Reagan will attend a Broyhill rally and a private fund-raiser, both in Raleigh, Haynes said. The public rally is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Raleigh Civic Center, said center director Roger Krupa.

The visit will come three days before Vice President George Bush's scheduled appearance at a Republican fund-raiser and rally at Emerald Isle. Both indicate the importance of Broyhill's campaign to the Reagan administration, Haynes said.

"We think it will show once again that Senator Broyhill is highly respected in Washington, that he has the confidence of President Reagan, and that he is dedicated to helping the president continue his positive change of direction for America," he said.

Reagan attended a June 4 rally for Broyhill that Republicans called the most lucrative political fund-raiser in the state's history, generating about $620,000.

Broyhill, appointed in July to succeed the late Sen. John East after serving over 23 years in the House, is locked in a tight campaign with former Gov. Terry Sanford, a Democrat.

Results of a poll taken in mid-September for the Raleigh News and Observer and the Winston-Salem Journal showed Broyhill preferred by 42.9 percent of the 602 likely voters surveyed and Sanford favored by 40 percent.

The margin of error was four percent, and the president of Independent Opinion Research and Communications Inc., which conducted the survey, said Broyhill's lead was statistically insignificant.

Helms lets risque note slip into Record

From Associated Press reports

A "dial-a-porn" recording was inadvertently inserted in the Congressional Record by Sen. Jesse Helms, who said Tuesday he regretted the incident but added that the material would at least show people

"how rotten this stuff is." The transcript, which Helms inserted in last Saturday's Record as he sought to argue that America's children should be protected from such sexually explicit material, begins:

"Hi, I'm Nellie from High Society and I'm so busy getting ready for my June wedding. Why don't you and I have a private shower."

Helms had the material inserted in the record before the Senate adopted his motion calling for banning of "dial-a-porn" services. Questioned Tuesday, the senator said he had brought the unexpurgated brief to the Senate floor in case his colleagues had questions about his proposal. "To a lot of people, this is an abstract thing," Helms said of the "dial-a-porn" operations.

An aide inadvertently put the brief into a stack of papers that was inserted into the record for publication, Helms said.

"I'm surprised they didn't catch it somewhere," he said. "I take full responsibility for it."

When Helms, on the Senate floor, asked to have the material placed in the record, he had several papers in his hand that staff members had given him, said Barbara Lukens, the senator's press secretary.

Armbands given out to show sympathy for Contra victims

By DONNA LEINWAND
Assistant State & National Editor

The Carolina Committee for Central America distributed armbands in the Pit Wednesday to educate people about who the Contras are, said Keith Griffier, committee member.

"The Contras are terrorists, basically," he said. "Reagan goes and says they are 'freedom fighters' but they are terrorists."

Wednesday was the first day of the fiscal year and the day that the United States officially begins sending $100 million in aid to support Contras in Nicaragua and Honduras.

The Contras are Nicaraguan rebels fighting to overthrow the government of President Daniel Ortega. The armbands had names of people who have been killed by the Contras, Griffier said.

The committee also gave out leaflets in the form of a check, he said. The checks were made out to the Contras for the amount of 50 cents, the amount every tax-paying American contributes to the Contra cause, he said.

Layne Poole, a sophomore from Lillington, said she wore the armband because she thinks President Reagan is condoning terrorism by supporting the Contras.

"It's funny because Reagan has come out so strongly against Libyan terrorism but he's giving South American terrorists money," she said.

Tickets available

Free tickets are available for President Reagan's campaign rally for Sen. Jim Broyhill in the Raleigh Civic Center next week. Reagan will appear at 11:30 a.m. on Oct. 8. Call the Wake County Broyhill office for more information at 790-0569, 790-0869 or 790-0970. Tickets must be picked up at the office located at 3301 Executive Dr. off Old Wake Forest Rd.
