Reid and Smith shine, Blue-White bores

By JAMES SUROWIECKI
 Assistant Sports Editor

Even the most passionate UNC basketball fan had to find his thoughts wandering as Saturday's Blue-White game came to a grating, tortuous, hurry-up-and-get-it-over-with end. The Blue team, riding Kenny Smith's 30 points, finally won 101-85, much to the relief of the hardy band of souls that stuck around and stayed out of the rain for the last basket.

Intra-squad contests never have the power of an Olivier performance, or for that matter of a Tom Bosley performance, and the fact that the game was a blowout didn't improve matters. The Kingdome has a noise meter. For Blue-White games, the Dean Dome should have a boredom meter.

The game did give the much-heralded freshmen a chance to strut their stuff in front of a big crowd, and unheralded Dave Popson a chance to shoot the ball 24 times. And, as legions of UNC fans past, present and future have said, say and will say again, "At least the Tar Heels won!" Hyuck, hyuck, hyuck.

Coach Dean Smith was around afterward, sporting a bemused look on his face at the four reporters hovering outside the locker room. "I didn't think anyone from the press would be here," he said. "It was typical for the first Blue-White game. We try to make it a conditioning session. The freshmen weren't too nervous. I think they showed their weakness defensively."

Grabbing a first look at the freshmen was the best reason, other than editor's orders, to be at the SAC. J.R. Reid, the nation's top recruit, dazzled the crowd with his spin moves in the lane and his enigmatic hair style. Reid had 21 points on seven of 11 shooting, but Smith bypassed the stars.

"I don't look at those things," Smith said. "He's improved a lot in two weeks. He's getting a feel for the game. Defensively, he's way behind, but he looked quick a couple of times tonight."

Reid's fellow freshman, Scott Williams, played hurt and scored just five points. But Williams did have one in-your-face, down-your-throat, through-your-shoes rejection of a Reid shot that revealed him as a player unafraid to intimidate in the paint.

As for those Tar Heels who no longer have new chrome on their bumpers, the Smiths shined brightest. Kenny Smith had 30 points, including a spectacular 5-of-6 from three-point range, and looked two or three weeks ahead of the rest of the team.

"I felt good today. I was ready to go," he said.

"If it's (the three point shot) open I feel confident. It was there and I tried to take advantage of it."

Ranzino Smith, who is seeking this year to downplay his reputation as Mr. Instant Offense, didn't help his cause by pouring in 24 points for the losing White squad. "It doesn't mean anything," he said. "I don't want people to think of me as a scorer. I want to be known as an all-around player."

There was one moment of concern in the game, when Joe Wolf went down in a heap. The injury looked bad, but the verdict was merely a sprained knee. Wolf will only miss a few days of practice.

Jeff Lebo, who battled vainly for the White squad, had 15 points on the day but was a miserable 1-of-5 from three-point range.

Men's soccer battles to frustrating 0-0 tie

By BONNIE BISHOP
 Staff Writer

The UNC men's soccer team held the 13th-ranked N.C. State Wolfpack to a 0-0 tie, after two overtime periods Friday afternoon, in a very physical battle.

"The tie was frustrating because I think we played hard enough to win," coach Anson Dorrance said. "If we'd been hanging on by our fingernails and we had tied it, then I would have been pleased with the result, but I think we had the ball in their end a bit and it's frustrating to tie in those circumstances."

Aside from the rivalry, the game was an important one for both teams. The Tar Heels had to win in order to keep their chances alive for an NCAA bid and N.C. State had to win to do the same for their hopes for the conference title.

"We had to win this," said Dorrance.

Because of the contest's importance and the classic State-UNC rivalry, the game turned into a very physical match. State had 33 fouls and the Tar Heels 27. Also, each team had three players with yellow cards.

"I think it's the nature of the rivalry (to be physical). I think it's sort of exciting to be in this kind of contest where everyone wants to win so badly," Dorrance said. "I think it's exciting that two schools have a rivalry going and the game can be this close and exciting."

The Tar Heels maintained control of the ball most of the second half and throughout the overtime. They outshot the Wolfpack 19 to 6, but were unable to put the ball in the net.
