A SUPPLEMENT TO THE DAILY TAR HEEL

The Daily Tar Heel, April 5, 1968

Tar Heel file

COVER: Civil rights in the 1980s

In this week's cover story, Denise Smitherman interviewed several civil rights experts and gives their assessment of the problems of the civil rights movement in the 1980s and its role in the future of the United States.....6

Profile of an activist

A sidebar to the cover story is the activist's view of the Martin Luther King's march to Washington D.C. in 1963 and the civil rights movement in Chapel Hill during the same time period.....7

Vallilly, vallilly intalasting

This week, Jim Surowiecki reviews David Garrow's new book Bearing the Cross, which is a complete work on Martin Luther King and the SCLC.....7

The band students go nuts over

Donna Leinwand interviews the leaders of the band who have rocked Chapel Hill and some of the nation's colleges with its risqué humor for over 30 years — Doug Clark and the Hot Nuts.3

Good Bett

The first installment is here of the Omnibus series profiling UNC creative writers, and this week's writer is... (drum roll please) Doris Betts of the UNC English department. 5

Say it ain't so, Joe!

Joe Bob Briggs this week reviews the comedy-hit Little Shop of Horrors. Don't be scared, go ahead and read it before your professor puts you to sleep.....10

Move over Rover and let Alison take over

Trumpets blare and a red carpet rolls out. Let's everybody out there in readerland give the new album reviewer Alison Howard a hefty round of applause for her debut review of the new releases from Other Bright Color's and Winter Hours.....10

Fare's fare

Some say this is the most scintillating part of the Omnibus. Well, we at the DTH are a modest bunch and do not wish to prejudice the home reader's opinion, so flip the pages and find out for yourself.....11

Editor: Amy Hamilton

Assistant Editor: Lisa Lorentz
