

Chicago group to present an evening full of the blues

By BETH RHEA
Staff Writer

The Kuumba Theatre will present its musical drama, "The Heart of the Blues," Saturday in Memorial Hall. The show traces the history of the blues as told through the lives of seven of the genre's greatest singers.

According to Val Ward, Kuumba Theatre founder and director, the show incorporates "high energy" and displays the "tremendous talent" of the cast.

The performance is sponsored by the Carolina Union Activities Board and its Performing Arts Committee in conjunction with the Martin Luther King Jr. Birthday Celebration Planning Committee.

The committees wanted a basic cultural event to be one of the activities scheduled for this week's observance of King's birthday. "The Heart of the Blues," presented by the Chicago-based company, was considered an appropriate choice to represent one aspect of black culture. "The blues is a very big part of black history, and it's an incredible form of expression for the black culture," said Edward Boehm, Performing Arts Committee chairman.

The cast of 16 will perform over 30 songs to tell the story of the blues singers, beginning with Mamie Smith, the first black woman to record, and including Billie Holiday, Alberta Hunter, Ma Rainey, Bessie Smith, Clara Smith, and Victoria Spivey.

"The Heart of the Blues" played for a highly successful eight-month run in Chicago, and its first engagement outside its native city was at the prestigious Montreal Jazz Festival. The group has also performed for enthusiastic audiences in Louisville, Ky., and Japan.

"It's a good-time show. It's fun," said Ward, who is also co-writer and co-arranger of "The Heart of the Blues." "The people will have a good time, but they will remember something, too."

She stressed that "The Heart of the Blues" is an audience-participatory show. "It breaks down the barrier between the performers and the audience," she said. "We haven't played anywhere where the audience didn't give it back to us."

The show touches all kinds of music including blues, gospel, jazz, Broadway tunes, folk and African chants. "If people love music, they'll love the show," Ward said.

The Heart of the Blues will be performed by Kuumba Theatre Saturday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Call 962-1449 for ticket information.

Union schedules classic flicks

By DAVID HESTER
Staff Writer

This semester's Carolina Union film series features an expanded schedule of well-known commercial films, according to film board chairman Beverley Lester, but it also includes a wide variety of rarely-seen classic and contemporary films.

This semester's schedule of recent hits includes such films as "Top Gun," "Back to School," and "Ferris Bueller's Day Off." Lester said that the Union is lucky to get such recently-released films for the series. Many of these more popular films will be shown on Friday Admission Nights.

In addition to these well-known

In addition to these well-known commercial films, Lester said that the Union will also show many lesser-known films that would otherwise be overlooked. The Union will feature acclaimed documentaries such as "Streetwise," for example, as well as award-winning foreign films like "The Tin Drum" and "Family Game." The Union will also show "Choose Me," a lesser-known contemporary film which is, according to Lester, "gaining cult status at campuses around the country."

Theme nights such as Film Noir Night, Silent Movie Night, Sci-Fi Night, and B Movie Night are also included on the spring schedule.

One of this semester's more notable theme nights is Nuke Night.

This series, originally titled Accidental Nuclear War Night, will include Sidney Lumet's "Fail Safe" and Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove: Or, How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb." Nuke Night, which Lester calls the Union's "gloom and doom night," will be presented Friday, Feb. 13.

Lester also said that the Union will try to present a student film night some time during the course of the semester. Although such events have been successful in past years, Lester said, lack of interest caused the cancellation of last year's program. No details have yet been set for a student film night this semester, but Lester said one will be scheduled if there is sufficient interest.
