COVER STORY:

8 Is it hoops or is it rock? Well, er, . . . it's local bands vying for the Rock 'n' Rollin' King of Hoops Crown, a title coined by none other than Billy Warden of the Floating Children. Jo Fleischer details the whole zany episode.

3 James Surowiecki, literature lover from the the land of loquation, finds himself enraptured by Robert Hughes' "The Fatal Shore," a historical look at Australia. Find out why in his review.

4 Don't say beer, say women's beer. The beer market is swinging to include, slowly but surely, the OTHER sex — women — who appear (gasp!) to be buying more beer than ever.

5 Ever wonder where years after years of graffiti, that dying art form, goes? No? All right, don't read it, but Beth Buffington talks to the people who have to clean it up on campus. Listen to them. Listen to the people who've read it for years. Need we say E.F. Hutton, or have you got the point?

6 Mickey Mouse, Garfield and — yeegads! — even those Cabbage Patch mushfaces are now helping you rap long-distance. Angela Hampton tells of college students who are letting their fingers do the walking on novelty phones.

6 Listen to famous musicians say it in a song. Memsy Price twists some famous lyrics and makes them have Real meaning. It's what you've been waiting for all week: Graffiti.

11 This is it — your last chance to give up picking fuzzies off your carpet and catch some real culture. It's all in Week's Fare.

12 Go bowling in Graham Memorial? Students used to. For all you aspiring (and non-aspiring) historians out there, here's the story behind some of UNC's oldest buildings.

13 Maybe it's a haunting legacy from the past that just won't go away, but skateboarding, now under the alias "skating," is wheeling back into vogue.

14 When the Chapel Hill blues bring you down, escape to those out-of-the-way (and not-so-out-of-the-way) joints that were right here under your little nose all the time. Sharon Kessler gives them a look.

15 It has been a decade since the man in horn-rimmed glasses peered across toward American shores. He's the King — Elvis Costello. Find out about the man behind the music while you study up for his Tuesday night concert at Duke.

Have a super summer. This Omni's last issue for the year.
