

The wet look is in Showers. High 85.

Documenting R.E.M.'s
latest release — Page 4

Men's soccer team keeps streak going — Page 10

It's N.C. State
Employment Week
Have a good one

The Daily Tar Heel

©Copyright 1987 The Daily Tar Heel

Serving the students and the University community since 1893

Volume 95, Issue 49

Tuesday, September 8, 1987

Chapel Hill, North Carolina

News/Sports/Arts 962-0245
Business/Advertising 962-1163

UNC ignores rain to douse Illinois, 34-14

By JAMES SUROWIECKI
Sports Editor

On a muddy track, the book says, you give the thoroughbreds a break, hand the ball off to the fullback and grind the opposing defense down. The game, the book says, will be low-scoring. Touchdowns will be the result of endurance, not flash.

Saturday, the book was wrong. On a rainy, miserable day in Kenan Stadium, the North Carolina Tar Heels used a big-play offense and a superior second-half defense to demolish Illinois, 34-14.

UNC was sparked offensively by sophomore tailback Torin Dorn, who showed off his break-away speed and marvelous ability to use his blockers as he twice slashed upfield for long gains. Dorn finished with 165 yards on just 15 carries, plus two touchdowns. His performance brought to mind another rainy day in Kenan, when his predecessor, Derrick Fenner, ravaged Virginia for 328 yards. But after Saturday, Dorn is the only UNC tailback that matters.

"Before the day I was kind of nervous, and I felt like I really had to test myself," Dorn said. "Today gave me a little confidence. I just did my job and the offensive line did its job and things just opened up."

In the first half, though, there was very little that was open. UNC

■ Miller's jaunt 8

quarterback Mark Maye struggled all day, finishing with a paltry 93 yards on 6-of-12 passing, and the Tar Heel ground attack found the Illini defensive line less than cooperative.

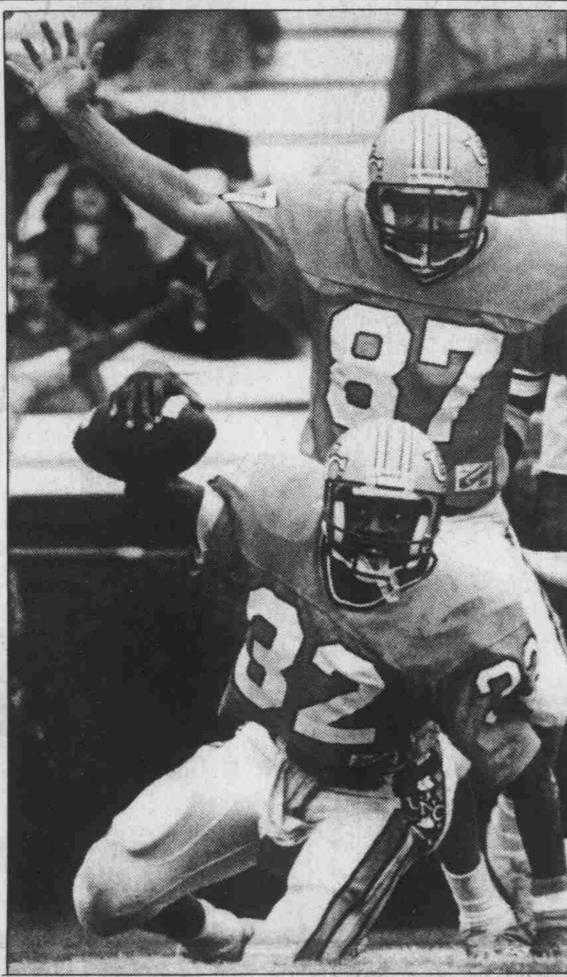

But UNC did get on the scoreboard first, thanks to tailback Lynn McLellan's fumble, which gave the Tar Heels first-and-goal from the Illinois 10.

Even from there, though, the Tar Heels couldn't punch it in. On second down, Maye found Eric Lewis in the end zone, but an offensive interference call pushed UNC back to the 24, where on third down Maye hit Lewis for 19 yards. Kenny Miller came on to kick a 21-yard field goal.

For the rest of the second quarter, the Tar Heel offense sputtered and coughed, not unlike many of the drenched fans in the stands. With less than three minutes to play in the first quarter, Maye overthrew a receiver and hit Illinois cornerback Keith Taylor right in the hands. Taylor returned the interception 32 yards.

Staying almost entirely on the ground, Illinois then drove to the UNC 13, where an offside penalty gave the Illini new life. On third-and-goal from the 9, Illinois quarterback Brian Menkhausen

See ILLINOIS page 10

Eric Lewis (32) and Quint Smith celebrate after touchdown pass
DTH/Charlotte Cannon

Members of committee announced

By DEBBIE RZASA
Staff Writer

Board of Trustees Chairman Robert Eubanks has revealed the members of the committee that will conduct the search for UNC Chancellor Christopher Fordham's successor.

Fordham announced Aug. 28 that he will vacate his office at the end of the 1987-88 academic year.

The search committee, which includes trustees, faculty, one alumnus and one student, will be responsible for screening candidates and making recommendations to UNC's trustees.

"It's a tremendous responsibility we're undertaking," Eubanks said Friday at the search committee's first meeting.

The Board of Trustees will recommend at least two candidates to UNC-system President C.D. Spangler.

Spangler will then choose one of the candidates, and submit his choice to the UNC system's Board of Governors for final approval.

"The thing that we're attempting to do with this process is to make sure that we have a broad representation of all the constituents of the University," Eubanks said.

The composition of the committee is similar to past search committees at UNC, Eubanks said, because the formula has always been effective.

The 14 members of the committee are Eubanks; Student Body President Brian Bailey; alumnus James Exum, chief justice of the N.C. Supreme Court; BOT Vice Chairman Earl Phillips; trustees Elizabeth Dowd, William Darity, Richard Jenrette, Barbara Perry and Robert Strickland; Faculty Chairman George Kennedy; Mary Ellen Jones, chairman of the Department of Biology and Nutrition; Edward Holley, professor of library science; Bernadette Gray-Little, professor of psychology; and William Little, distinguished professor in the Department of Chemistry.

Eubanks, who would not say when he expected the final chancellor selection to be made, said the committee will take as much time as necessary to find the best candidate.

"President Spangler has explained to us that with such an important process, we should not be bind by any timetable," Eubanks said. "The candidates will determine the timetable."

The first responsibility of the search committee will be to determine the best way to advertise for qualified applicants for the position. Then, Eubanks said, the committee will decide how to proceed with open hearings.

A broad range of people — including faculty members, alumni, admin-

See COMMITTEE page 5

Several districts are still unrepresented in congress

By KIMBERLY EDENS
Staff Writer

More than one-third of Student Congress seats will remain unfilled until elections on Oct. 6, leaving several districts unrepresented in fall congress decisions.

Eleven of the 28 congress seats are not filled, according to Rob Friedman, congress speaker. Seven representatives either graduated or moved out of the districts they represented, three seats were never filled last semester and one representative is resigning.

The 17 congress members are expected to make decisions this month about funding for the Black Student Movement and the Carolina Symposium. They will also decide if an amendment to raise student activity fees $5 in order to finance a new drop-add computer system should be voted on by students in October.

"I don't like it," Friedman said, referring to the unrepresented districts. "But the people who vote chose to have these people in office. They (the voters) should ask, 'Are you going to be around next year?'"

Some students run for congress only to be involved in the April budget process, Friedman said. During the spring budget hearings, congress determines what student organizations receive funding from student activity fees.

"That's something that has to be changed — either the February election date, or the inauguration date," he said.

A constitutional referendum would

See CONGRESS page 4

National report notes shortage of business school professors

By TOM MCCUISTON
Staff Writer

If the recent report issued by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business is any indication of the shortage of business professors, perhaps this semester's add cards for business classes should have been colored gold instead of lavender.

The AACSB's report noted 16 percent of tenure-track teaching positions remained unfilled during the 1986-87 academic year, and every doctoral graduate in business has four academic positions facing him.

"There is no question that there is a shortage (of business professors)," said David Rubin, director of the Ph.D. program at UNC's School of Business Administration. "Our Ph.D. graduates have no problems getting a job at all."

Rubin said the growing number of students seeking undergraduate business and MBA degrees is the main cause of the current problem.

"Last year there were 70,000 MBA graduates," he said. "When I got my MBA in 1969, there were 16,000."

Jim McKee, a consultant for the AACSB, said the main causes of the shortage are business students eager to enter the private sector, students tired of financing their education, and the growing number of older Ph.D. business professors who are now retiring.

"The great popularity of business education has caused many schools to open business schools," McKee said. "Business schools now award approximately 24 percent of all bachelor's degrees."

The shortage of business professors and surplus of students seeking business degrees certainly has been felt in North Carolina.

John Evans, a professor and the former dean of the UNC School of

See SHORTAGE page 3

Soaking rain didn't sink student spirit during UNC football season opener

By RACHEL ORR
Staff Writer

Although rain drenched Kenan Stadium Saturday during Carolina's first football game of the season, it didn't dampen the crowd's enthusiasm.

Bobby Mauriello, wearing a Budweiser cap to secure the blue-and-white poms dangling from his ears, sported Tar Heel tracks across his face, courtesy of the Carolina

■ Labor Day photos 6,7

Fever Committee face-painters.

Mauriello, a freshman from New York City, cheered and gave several "high fives" during his first-ever Carolina football game, as the Tar Heels beat Illinois 34 to 14.

"It's pretty exciting," Mauriello said during halftime. "I'm going to go to every game for the next four years!"

Suzanne Lowe, Carolina Fever Committee co-president, also said she was excited about the spirit displayed at the Labor Day weekend game.

"I think it was really great, considering the rain and everything," Lowe, a senior, said. "I think the Carolina Fever was really strong."

To boost spirit, the Carolina Athletic Association committee

See SPIRIT page 5

Bang bang

David Bowie performed in the sold-out Smith Center on Sunday night. Members of his band included Toni Basil (left), and guitarist Peter Frampton. See review, page 5.

DTH/Charlotte Cannon

The secret of eternal youth is delayed maturity. — Alice Roosevelt Longworth