Here's the (unofficial) schedule for the Pope's tour of the states

By JOE BOB BRIGGS

Keep this schedule by your TV the next few days. It's everything the Pope is gonna be doing on his summer vacation.

First day: His Holy Roly Polyness John Paul Numero Two-o will be greeted at Miami International Airport by a Cuban couple and their 37 children. The Pope will kiss the ground and all jet exhaust tubes on his Delta plane. He will then check into the Fountainbleu where a complimentary Banana Coco Loco, the non-alcoholic "St. Bartholomew" version, will be waiting on him. He'll only have about 30 minutes to catch rays, then it's off to . . .

Columbia, S.C.: He will be greeted at the airport by Lester and Wilma Scroggins, a 63-year-old Catholic couple who haven't had sex for 37 years and no longer desire it. They will receive a very special blessing from His Celibateness before he goes into a 30-minute meeting with the South Carolina Legislature, which is considering a statewide ban on the sale of condoms to anybody who knows how to use one.

Next, it's off to New Orleans, for a jam session with Al Hirt and Pete Fountain. They don't call the Pope "Mister Rhythm" for nothin'.

Be sure to watch TV the day he gets to San Antonio. The Pope will be asked to break open a pinata and — here's the surprise part — it will be FILLED WITH ILLEGAL ALIENS. Watch 'em tumble!

In a more serious vein, the Pope will travel to Phoenix to conclude a 29-square-mile real estate deal for a Catholic RV park and water slide.

When completed in 2007, John Paul's Jesus City will be staffed exclusively by Dominican monks dressed up like Italian saints. The Pope will also travel outside the city for a private meeting with Enzo "The Stopper" Leone, who wrote a letter to Rome asking how he can go to heaven. The Pope's advice will reportedly include regular tooth-brushing, thinking nice thoughts, and a low-salt diet.

The Pope plans to stop off in El Lay to cut his new single, "Lesbians Look Ugly to God, Too," and then he'll motor up the coast, chunk a few rocks at Shirley MacLaine's beach house while shouting "Go back to 326 B.C. and try again," stop at a fish place in Monterey, head up to San Francisco, and following his custom, will give his speech in the native language: "How about these silk slippers? Are these cute or what? I bet you'd just DIE for a pair, wouldn't you? Well, honey, they're PURE sin, but they're little ole mine."

Finally, even though it wasn't on the original schedule, the Pope's just GOT to stop off in Detroit on the way home. Why? Hometown of Madonna. The Pope will issue his only major policy address at that time, dealing with sexual relations. The speech is called "LIKE a Virgin? She WAS a Goldang Virgin. And If She Can Do It, You Can Too."

Speaking of a 175-year-old man, this guy in "House II" decides to dig up his great-great-grandpa's grave to steal a magic skull, only Gramps is a mummy zombie who's so EVIL that he wants to MOVE IN WITH THE RELATIVES. So, Jesse, the great-great-grandson, lets him live in the basement for a while, but only if he behaves himself and promises to go back into his grave after the vacation. Then Jesse's dingbat friend Charlie bops by, gets drunk with Gramps, and lets him drive a 1986 Alfa Romeo Spider. Then a Hercules caveman sort of guy comes by the house to do the pony at a costume party, only he ends up punching out a monkey-suit extra, stealin' the magic skull, and turning the upstairs bedroom into an alternative-universe set of out of "Quest for Fire." Then there's a bunch of plot about a pterodactyl and a wormdog and how Jesse and Charlie have to save the skull or else the forces of evil will take over their brains and then they go rescue a virgin from some Aztec metalheads that stuck their alternate universe behind the light socket in the living room. Finally somebody calls up the SWAT team and says, "There's an entire audience being held hostage in this movie," and so the SWAT team shows up outside the house and starts shootin' it out with ANOTHER 175-year-old outlaw named Slim, only I can't remember how he got there.

No breasts. Fifteen dead bodies. Two living dead bodies. One exploding head. One motor vehicle chase. Gratuitous Uzi semi-automatic sub-machine gun fire. Gratuitous wormdog. Ironing board Fu. Mummy Fu. Pterodactyl Fu. Aztec Fu. Tyrannosaurus Rex Fu. Drive-in Academy Award nominations for Sean Cunningham, the mastermind producer of "Friday the 13th" and "Spring Break" and "The New Kids," for doing it again; Lar Park Lincoln, as Kate the airhead record exec wife, for saying

Important health tip — try not to let those bolo ties cut off the circulation

"Wow! who decorated this place?"; Amy Yasbeck, Charlie's bimbo girlfriend, for calling herself "the Madonna of the 80s"; John Ratzenberger, as Bill the electrician, for saying, "I've seen this before and it's always made my adenoids curdle"; and Royal Dano, as the 175-year-old mummy Grandpa, for saying "I ain't gonna die if it's the last thing I do"; and "Did you blow his head off? That's a good boy."

Four stars. Joe Bob says check it out.
