Want both Greek and Italian? Look!

From staff reports

Now, that's Italian! Or, wait, maybe it's Greek. It's both. Restaurants that specialize in Mediterranean and Aegean cuisine abound in Chapel Hill. Alas, we could not begin to include them all. Here's a partial list:

Mariakakis' Restaurant and Bakery on Highway 15-501 bypass features Italian and Greek food and some incredible baklava. They also have really good pizza for the lowest prices in Chapel Hill. A large 16-inch pepperoni pizza is $6.20, and their large deluxe six-topping pizza is $9.20.

This is a great place to go with a group of friends. The atmosphere is very casual, ideally suited to the student wardrobe.

On the way out, be sure to check out the pastries. You're cheating yourself if you don't indulge at least once in these handmade goodies.

Leo's Restaurant, hidden behind a wall of hanging plants and located a good walk down East Franklin Street (about a block past McDonald's, for those who recognize such landmarks), features more up-market Greek and Italian food in a casual atmosphere. The Italian side of the menu tends to be less expensive and more recognizable, with dishes such as eggplant parmesan and some very good lasagna ranging in price from $4.50 to about $6. The pizza, while not cheap, is worthwhile (claimed by many patrons to be the best in town, though for this writer it comes in second to the whole wheat pizza at Sunshine Cafe across the street), especially when topped with feta cheese.

The Greek entrees may be impossible to pronounce, but they prove to be more interesting. They are also more expensive, ranging from $6 for a healthy slice of spanakopita or mousaka to $11 for the lamb shish-kebob. All dishes, of whatever ethnicity, come with a salad and delicious homemade bread. Especially recommended are zsigiki with pita bread and house dressing (go ahead, soak the bread in it).

Sal's Pizza and Italian Restaurant, located in Eastgate Shopping

Center, is also a great place to go with a bunch of friends. The pizza is good, the service friendly and prices cheap and the atmosphere is very casual. The red-checked tables and spacious wooden booths create an atmosphere conducive to socializing with a large group. Subs, lasagna, spaghetti and daily specials (Monday through Friday) are also available. Keep them in mind the next time you and your friends want "to go out for a pizza."

Pepper's Pizza, a fairly new addition to the Chapel Hill pizza scene, offers students a slightly spicier type of pie. Open from 11 a.m. until midnight, Monday through Wednesday and until 2:30 a.m. Thursday through Saturday, Pepper's caters to the late-night Franklin Street strollers who get munchie attacks. Unlike most area pizza places, Pepper's does not deliver, but that's all the more reason to go visit their cozy (26-customer capacity) nook, where the graffiti is as colorful and spicy as the pizza they serve. Pizza is available by the pie or the slice.

Looking for a good place to have a drink? Take notice of these local watering holes

From staff reports

For the 20 percent or so of you on campus who have retained (or regained) the right to drink in North Carolina, here's a partial list of the local watering holes:

The Cave — Dark, smoky, sweaty, cheap. Chapel Hill's most down-to-earth bar, where there's never a cover, almost always a band, and draft's a dollar. There's pool in the back under harsh light and darts in the front under no light.

Henderson Street Bar — Features daily specials on beer, wine or wine coolers. Containing a classic juke box and a wide variety of pinball machines, Henderson Street is frequented at many times during the day. Regulars say people are known to get their lunch or dinner at a nearby establishment and proceed to the bar for a thirst quencher. Students are also known to hit Henderson Street heavily to watch basketball and football games on the color television located above the bar. Prices are reasonable and bartenders serve you with a smile and a "Thank-you."

Troll's — A beer drinker's paradise. Frequented by both college students and townspeople, Troll's specializes in pitchers and bottles of beer, although a wine cooler has been known to surface.

Decorated with large wooden booths and a game room in the back, the bar has plenty of space for roaming and socializing. Another special feature is the Troll's juke box. Containing country and rock 'n' roll, it is often subjected to loud sing-alongs by its regular customers. Beer is moderately priced and bartenders are quick to serve.

Jordan's — Laid-back, comfortable and inexpensive. The bar is a division of the restaurant, Jordan's Le Charolais Steak House on Rosemary Street, and is the perfect place to go with a friend to talk and enjoy a drink. Whether you desire a beer or a mixed drink, Jordan's can accommodate. Weekly specials are an added plus to a visit. Highballs for $1 and 75 cents for a longneck beer seem to be the most popular. Specialty drinks are available upon request.

A quality unique to this bar is that carrying on a conversation is possible. The music is controlled behind the bar and always kept at a reasonable level. Bartenders have also been known to play a tape or two brought in by a customer, so keep that in mind.

Bub's Pub — The latest watering hole in Chapel Hill! Featuring a wide variety of beers in bottles or by the pitcher, Bub's is one of the most spacious bars in town, although it may not seem that way on a Friday night. With a wide-screen TV against the back wall, movies and sports spectaculars are often viewed as occupants sip a cold one. Bub's also features a juke box that caters to almost any musical desire. A variety of t-shirts hang on the walls to entice the bar's regulars into becoming a walking advertisement (with the looks of things on campus, it's working). Bub's owners and bartenders are well-deserving of their obvious success.

Theodore's — It's not a run-of-the-mill bar. It's a bar and comedy club. Located next to Avie's Hallmark on Franklin Street, Theodore's allows 19-year-olds to enjoy the show, but not the spirits. It's equipped with a long, spacious bar and friendly bartenders, so ordering never seems a chore. Bruce Frye, a former performer at Springfest, frequents the club on occasions and always packs in a crowd.

He's Not Here — If you like to enjoy a beer in the great outdoors, this is the bar for you. With a huge outdoor patio area, there is plenty of room for you to sip on a "bucket" of beer. A bucket is a huge Carolina cup filled to the rim with your choice of available beer.

Now for those of you wondering what to do in the case of rain — enter the two-story bar. Live entertainment is another interesting facet to this 16-year-old Carolina institution, and usually takes place on Saturday nights.

Cat's Cradle — If you like to hear local and national bands, rising acts or obscure acts, the Cradle is the place for you. Located next to Fowler's on Franklin Street, the Cradle allows 18-year-olds to partake of the fun. The club's atmosphere is as unique as the individual acts. Murals on the wall feature dinosaurs playing musical instruments and the dance floor can accommodate a healthy crowd.
