

Fraternity plans football tourney

The third annual Phi Kappa Sigma Skull Bowl Football Classic will be held Friday and Saturday on Ehringhaus Field.

Thomas Beam, coordinator of the Football Classic, said the tournament, held in November last year, has been moved up this year to correspond with the intramural football season. "It's easier to get teams together before their intramural tournament and the end of the season," he said.

About 20 fraternity, residence hall and intramural teams are expected to play, he said. Although most teams that register to play are all-male, Beam said no teams will be turned away.

"We don't have any special rules for co-ed teams," Beam said, "but if they come out, they will be allowed to play."

The goal of the tournament is to raise money for the American Diabetes Association, Beam said. The teams must pay a $30 registration fee to enter the Bowl. Other funds are being raised through sponsorship by local businesses and the sale of T-shirts, he said.

The money will be used to pay for plaques for the first-place team and T-shirts and food coupons for the runner-up teams, Beam said.

When matching up the teams to play, the coordinators take into consideration time conflicts and special requests, he said. "We want everyone to be able to play as many games as possible."

N.C. State hosts drug conference

Prompted by new pressure on businesses to combat drug abuse, a statewide conference focusing on interaction between the public and private sectors to solve drug problems will be held Monday in the McKimmon Center at N.C. State University.

In an effort to form prevention coalitions in North Carolina, Gov. Jim Martin has invited all 100 county commission chairmen and their teams of community leaders to the conference.

"There is a new focus on the workplace, using the resources of corporate America," said Michael Walsh, director of the Office of Workplace Initiatives with the National Institute of Drug Abuse. "We need good substance abuse policies in the public and private sectors, with the basic principle of getting substance abuse employees treatment and getting them back into the workplace."

Walsh will be the keynote speaker at the luncheon.

The conference is intended to open discussion between the public and private sectors, and the governor is depending on all segments of the community to fight the problem of drug abuse, said Don Bowen, deputy director of public affairs for the department of human resources.

The conference will be broken into two sessions, with a morning panel discussion to be moderated by Attorney General Lacy Thornburg. Panelists representing different parts of the public and private sectors will discuss the efforts of each to combat substance abuse.

Human Resources Secretary Dave Flaherty will moderate the afternoon workshop on communication and partnerships between the public and private sectors.

The conference will begin and end with Martin's addresses to the 500 people who are expected to attend. The morning session will also include remarks by Johnnie McLeod, chairman of the Governor's Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse Among Children and Youth; Catherine Crosby, director of the Crosby Foundation, and Lori Boggs, Miss North Carolina. Members of Students Against Driving Drunk have handled the logistics of the event, and Boggs will be doing follow-up work with the students, McLeod said.

The goal of the conference is to raise every town's awareness to the need for coalitions to educate and treat substance abusers. There will be follow-up training for conference participants.

"The one day is a motivation day," she said. Regional organization and training will continue at a local level, she said.

Money for prevention efforts will be available to every county to start the programs, McLeod said. Task forces will be allotted $500 this year, and — following an evaluation of their efforts — $500 in 1988. The money will come out of the governor's $1.2 million federal grant for prevention.

Counties will also be eligible for more funds if they apply for a grant, McLeod said.

"That's the carrot we have to get people to (the conference)," she said.

He also criticized Bork for not supporting the country's "beleaguered justices" when they made unpopular decisions for the good of civil rights.

"If he now says, grudgingly, that he accepts these rulings, it is important to note that at the time, when it counted, he was one of the most boisterous of the faultfinders," Leuchtenburg said.

Bork's untimely support poses questions on the implications of his behavior for the future, Leuchtenburg said.

Leuchtenburg said answers to his questions about Bork could determine whether the next time the United States celebrates a milestone in Constitutional history will be cause for "continued rejoicing" or "melancholy reflection."

Before you choose a long distance service, take a close look.

You may be thinking about choosing one of the newer carriers over AT&T in order to save money.

Think again.

Since January 1987, AT&T's rates have dropped more than 15% for direct-dialed out-of-state calls. So they're lower than you probably realize. For information on specific rates, you can call us at 1 800 222-0300.

And AT&T offers clear long distance connections, operator assistance, 24-hour customer service, and immediate credit for wrong numbers. Plus, you can use AT&T to call from anywhere to anywhere, all over the United States and to over 250 countries.

You might be surprised at how good a value AT&T really is. So before you choose a long distance company, pick up the phone.
