Wolfpack nets late OT goal to tie women's soccer, 1-1

By JAY REED
Staff Writer

RALEIGH — "It doesn't get any tighter than this," said women's soccer head coach Anson Dorrance following Tuesday's 1-1 overtime tie with N.C. State.

After more than 100 minutes of gruesome battle between the country's two top teams, UNC's Lori Henry finally broke through scoring at the 103:15 mark in the first overtime.

"It was a great spectator's game," N.C. State head coach Larry Gross said.

Sophomore forward Charmaine Hooper of State scored the game-tying goal with only 2:12 left in the second overtime.

Dorrance said the game felt like a loss, but he added that he would not make any changes in UNC's game preparations for the next time these two teams meet.

"We had our chances to win," a disgruntled Dorrance said.

The first half started much the same way all of UNC's games have this year, with no pressure for the defense but no early finishing on offense. The Heels' front line of senior Wendy Gebauer and junior Julie Guarnotta received many well-placed midfield feeds, but the young — but steady — State defense stifled all attempts.

Carolina dominated the first-half statistics, with UNC getting eight shots and four corner kicks to State's three shots and one corner. But on the scoreboard, the game remained a scoreless tie.

The second stanza began as the first ended, with UNC firing three shots in the first ten minutes.

Senior midfielder Birthe Hegstad, returning from a tour with her native Norwegian National Team, added a spark to UNC's scoring threat but could not light up the nets with a goal. At 57:40 and again at 52:43, Hegstad fired close-range shots that eluded the back of the Wolfpack goal.

State stayed in the game by allowing outside runs by UNC but filling in the penalty box to converge on any Tar Heel passes to an attacker near the goal.

Hooper, the eventual State heroine, kept the UNC defense on their toes the whole second half. Her movement on and off the ball switched up even the Heels' stalwart backs, but UNC still managed to keep the ball out of their net for the remainder of regulation.

In the first overtime period, UNC once again took to the attack. Junior midfielder Shannon Higgins and Gebauer nailed shots that were grabbed by Brecher. UNC continued their assault with five corner kicks in the initial overtime period alone.

But it was the fifth corner that was crucial.

UNC's Higgins leisurely set up the offense from the right corner. She then lofted the ball to the awaiting head of Henry, who from six yards out headed the pass by Brecher's outstretched arms and into the upper right of the State goal.

A jubilant Tar Heel team then settled down to move quickly into the final stanza.

Verbally captaining the team, junior sweeper Carla Werden kept the Wolfpack offense off-balance by continually stifling long outside runs by sophomore wing Fabienne Gareau.

But at 108:40, State got a free kick from 20 yards out and used a planned corner kick to apply their most potent offensive threat of the afternoon. The chaotic play failed, but that surge of scoring power shifted the edge over to State's side.

With time running out and the scoreboard clock turned off, State moved with their final quest of a score.

Once again UNC fouled at about 25 yards outside of their goal. This time, however, it was not a trick play, and it would set up State's tally.

On the free kick, Hooper received a short pass through a teammate's legs and let it fly with a rocket into the far upper-left corner of the Tar Heel net.

Hooper called it without a doubt the biggest goal of her short career, and she said this tie will give the Wolfpack a big boost for the rest of their season.

For Dorrance and his Tar Heels, they will have to regroup quickly following this disappointment. The Heels travel to Colorado Springs, Colo., Thursday to take on nationally ranked Colorado College and then face Cal-Santa Clara on Saturday.

Dorrance had his own ideas on how the Tar Heels can improve in preparation for the big road trip. "We have to start focusing better in the attacking box," Dorrance said. "We have to make better decisions on offense."

Brown expecting 'high' Cards

By MIKE BERARDINO
Sports Editor

Mack Brown looked out at the modest gathering of media types and held his right hand high over his head, as high as he could reach. The first-year coach of the Tar Heel football team may have been smiling, but he was trying to make a very serious point.

"They will come in here this high," Brown said in reference to the Louisville Cardinals, UNC's next opponent. "We've got to plan on Louisville playing the game of their lives Saturday."

Louisville, in its fourth year under the leadership of coach Howard Schnellenberger, is off to a 1-2 start. The Cardinals finally got in the win column last Saturday with a 29-18 win over Memphis State.

The 1-2 mark doesn't exactly inspire fear, unless, of course, your own record is 0-2, which is where Brown's Tar Heels stand after losses to South Carolina and Oklahoma.

"I don't think there's an 0-2 team in America that can overlook anybody," Brown said Tuesday at his weekly press conference in Kenan Field House. "We need to win the ball game."

North Carolina had last weekend off, which gave the UNC players and coaches time to contemplate many things, among them the team's five-game losing streak dating back to last season.

Face it, the Tar Heels have not won a game since they beat Maryland in College Park late last October. And UNC's home losing streak currently stands at five as well. The last time Kenan Stadium emptied to a post-game victory celebration was after the 1987 season-opener against Illinois.

"We are not going to be a dominating team over anybody we play," the coach said. "We can't roll the ball out, play poorly and beat anybody on our schedule. We're in the transition stages, we're playing a lot of young people. We just hope that we continue to improve each week."

Brown said the Tar Heels' quarterback situation is still up in the air, but he did not seem particularly concerned about naming either Deems May or Jonathan Hall the full-time starter.

"Until one guy steps out, it's not really a factor who starts," Brown said. "We're having trouble finding the right niche for both guys. I could name a starter today, but it might change by Saturday. We need both of them."

Neither quarterback has exactly lit the college football world ablaze yet this season. May, a redshirt freshman, has started both UNC losses and completed just under 42 percent (23-for-55) of his passes. Hall, the more experienced junior, has connected on just three of 16 pass attempts this year.

Between them, the UNC quarterbacks have thrown three interceptions and no touchdowns. The longest pass completion so far this year for the Tar Heels has been 19 yards.

"Mechanically, there's not a lot of things we'd change from the first two ballgames," Brown said. "We haven't had the big play except for the (43-yard Randy Mariotti) reverse against South Carolina."

"Offensively, we have only scored 10 points in two weeks. We have not moved the ball consistently, and we're averaging only 25 minutes in time of possession."

That last statistic has resulted in the overextension of UNC's defense, a pattern which must be reversed if the Tar Heels are to post a winning (or at least respectable) record this season.

According to Brown's injury report, linebacker Mitch Wike (intestinal tear) is still out, while defensive back Clarence Carter, who underwent minor arthroscopic surgery on his knee after the Oklahoma game, is doubtful. Brown listed both tight end John Keller and defensive tackle Roy Barker as probable for this week's game.
