Up front:

- 6 Gardens with stones Sculptures, actually. Go with Anne-Renee Rice as she takes you to the North Carolina Botanical Gardens' sculpture exhibit. But watch out for the Venus flytrap.
- 3 Burning up the comeback trail Ten Ten is on their way up again. Catch them on the rise as they heat up a music club near you.
- 4 Radon can kill you So can ghosts posing as cameras. Or so Joe Bob says. And you know he'd never lie.
- 5 Go Trolling Among other things, as Elizabeth Ellen shares her random thoughts about sailors, soldiers, George Bush and their opinions about the new Troll's.
- 5 A different breed of dog Allison Pike talks to Poi Dog Pondering, a Hawaiian-based band who just can't be pinned down.
- 5 Name that day Do you know when Friendship Day is? How about United Nations' or Mother-in-Law's days? This week graffiti goes off the wall and onto the calendar to take a look at some weird holidays.
- 8 From screen to silver screen If you're staying in town for Fall Break, treat yourself to one of those movies you haven't had time to see yet. Plenty of flicks recently opened and are playing in theaters near you. Go ahead, get the TUB of buttered popcorn.
- 10 Breaking away Most of you are probably going somewhere, anywhere this weekend, but for those of you vacationing in our quaint village, Week's Fare has your weekend covered.
- 11 Not quite a masterpiece But this angelic film set in Berlin comes very close. James Dean reviews Wim Wenders' film, "Wings of Desire."
- 12 Go ahead, Bragg Usually it's considered sort of rude, but Doug Edmunds waxes truly rhapsodic about Billy Bragg's new album, Worker's Playtime, which combines love, relationships and political beliefs.

FOR THE RECORD:

In last week's Ackland Art Museum cover story, it was incorrectly reported that the University owns part of the museum's collection and plans to buy the entire collection sometime in the future. The majority of the collection is owned by the Ackland Trust, which is based in Washington, D.C. Omnibus regrets the reporting error.
