

Large baby-making women and bloodsucking babydolls

Wanda Bodine told me that, since she's so fat, she might as well get pregnant. It would be a good time to do it, specially since she has her law degree now and so she'll be able to figure out how to dump that baby in day care after two, three weeks and force somebody else to pay for it.

"My biological clock has done run around the dial three times," is the way she put it.

None of this babbling about being pregnant bothered me, particularly, until she started rubbing up against me in the line at Wyatt's Cafeteria and saying stuff like "I just bought a new Beautyrest and pretty soon I'll have money for sheets."

Then it occurred to me — who's gonna need a MALE INDIVIDUAL to carry this off.

I don't know if you've ever met any of the Bodine sisters, but they get em a husband for five, six weeks, use him long enough to plant some seeds where it counts, and then tell him "You, Dwayne, are not fulfilling my potential as a modern woman, you never pick up your socks, and we have nothing in common."

Course, by then they have something in common, Dwayne just don't find out till seven months later when she calls him up about "sharing the expenses of our child."

I never did understand this until Wanda and her sister Doreen explained it to me one night. I was thinking all my life all a woman wanted was a man she could manipulate into marrying her. What they really want is a man they can manipulate into giving em BABIES. This is the thing for the women of the '90s. Get rid of that turkey just as he's done the ONE JOB in the poor sucker's life that he can't get fired from, then boot his hiney out of there before he does something like ADMIT HE'S THE FATHER. That gets you into all kinds of legal problems like being forced to run the kid out to his house on weekends when you don't have a date.

Anyhow, the Bodine sisters have had nine babies now — and they're all named "Bodine" except for little Raul. They call him "Raul Bodino" because nobody'd believe it if you called him plain Bodine. So I think you can see what's going on here. The only reason I bring it up is that I don't give a flip. Personally, I know how to protect my personal integrity in the Wyatt's Cafeteria line and not go ape just cause some 260-pound baby-making machine flashes a little thigh while she's shoving a tray full of lemon merangue through the check-out line, but many of you reading this newspaper might not of ever met the Bodine sisters and so when Wanda shows up, you'll be dead meat. After all, she's REAL good looking for a gal that looks like she oughta have an apple in her mouth.

Speaking of rubbery substances inhabited by the devil, "Child's Play" is one of the most original horror flicks in a while, about a little 6-year-old yard monster who gets a talking Chucky Doll for his birthday and finds out it's possessed by the soul of a psycho devil-worship murderer. Most of the time Chucky is a great pal. It's only occasionally that he decides to do something like knock the babysitter through a sixth-story window with a ball-peen hammer, or hide in a mental hospital so he can clamp shock-treatment head-pinchers on a doctor, flip the switch and watch his face turn into a bacon bit. But know what the mean old adults think? They think it's little Andy doing all the grisly murders around Chicago, and he's just BLAMING it on Chucky. Fortunately, Andy's mom is Catherine Hicks. Remember how she saved the whales in "Star Trek IV"? If she can save the whales, she can save Andy from a demon-possessed unkillable walking, talking, strangling, snarling, cussing, biting, stabbing cute little toy doll. Chucky is very insincere.

No breasts. Six dead bodies. Exploding toy store. Exploding South Chicago urban renewal house. One excellent out-of-control motor vehicle scene, with Chucky trying to kill a cop in a car traveling 90 through The Loop. Heads roll. Hands roll. Legs roll. Gratuitous devil talk. Gratuitous Chucky-Cam. Ball-peen hammer Fu. Scalpel Fu. Voodoo Fu. And, of course, Mattel Fu. Drive-In Academy Award nominations for Chucky The Doll, created by David Kirschner, which was operated by eight puppeteers and is one of the best special-effects creatures ever built for the movies; Alex Vincent, as the 6-year-old Andy, for kicking hiney and for saying "Chucky says that lady was a real bitch who got what she deserved"; Catherine Hicks, for kicking Chucky around and saying "Say something, dammit!"; and Tom Holland, the director, who did "Fright Night" and then outdid himself with this one.

Four stars.

Hey Joe Bob,
 I was in West Texas once. I thought it was great that you can drive around with open beers. Also, I saw a thing on CNN today where some guy in Grapevine had a pet pig. Whoa! Call Bekins!

Dear Bob:
 If you are referring to Claude Swenson's Montana No. 1 Spotted Hereford Short-Bristle Grazing Show Swine, for your information his NAME is Arch.
 Archibald to you.

Dear Joe Bob,
 Do you want my sister?
 Andy Wyrard
 Plano, Texas

Dear Andy:
 Yes, but only because you have such respect for her.

Dear Joe Bob,
 My cuzin is in LOVE with you! Whenever she reads your articles or sees you on TV, she clenches her fists and screams in excitement. We are planning to have a "Bad Taste" house warming party. We would like you to come. Attire for the evening will include tacky polyester clothing, and we'll be serving fallen souffles and burnt cookies. (You might want to eat out a McDonald's before coming.) Many people are borrowing from my cuzin's closet for this gala affair, but you can come as you are! If all goes as my cuzin plans, you won't be in your clothes for long, anyway.

The evil Chucky doll is like Mr. Bill in reverse.

Jerry Jacobsen
 El Sobrante, Calif.

Dear Jerry:
 Sounds too good to be true. Which part of your cousin is missing?

Hey Joe Bob,
 Is there truth to the rumor that Robin Givens and Brigitte Nielsen are secret members of a wacked-out, pro-feminist, men hatin' infiltration squad? The Enquirer hasn't run any article like this, so I suspect it may be true. So what is the Joe Bob Truth?

In contemplation,
 Mark "The Gwee" Gurwell
 Seattle

Dear Mark:
 You guys with the bucks, how many times do I have to tell you? It goes like this:

To have and to hold on to
 For better or for slightly uncomfortable.

Till death or a humongous argument do us part.

I promise by these vows to give you everything covered in the contract.

Go get Melvin Belli, he'll tell you how to write it up.
