This is it: Women's team to host soccer Final Four

By SCOTT GOLD
Staff Writer

Let me just start you off with this scary statistic: The North Carolina women's soccer team has now gone 68 games without a loss, a streak in which the Tar Heels have gone 63-0-5. Now that's amazing, you say, but not scary. Keep reading.

In those 68 games, UNC has trailed for 13 minutes and 10 seconds out of the 6,210 minutes played, meaning they have been behind 0.2 percent of the time.

Let's all say it together: scary. This weekend the Tar Heels will host the NCAA Final Four on Fetzer Field. They will be matched against a spotty but dangerous University of Wisconsin team on Saturday at 1 p.m., right after the other semifinal game, pitting N.C. State against California-Berkeley at 11 a.m.

North Carolina brings a long tradition of championship-caliber teams into this year's tourney. UNC is now 18-1 in postseason play, suffering its only loss in the 1985 championship game. The Tar Heels are 6-0 in semifinal games.

"I think there's a great deal of excitement," coach Anson Dorrance said. "We're excited for all sorts of reasons — that we're in the Final Four, that we're hosting it, et cetera. Our preparation right now takes on a much greater focus, and I think it usually does. When the national championship rolls around, we have a tradition of trying to peak."

UNC is coming off a hard-fought, 2-1 victory over Central Florida last weekend. Wendy Gebauer had the first goal and an assist on the second. Freshman Chris Huston scored the game-winner, her first collegiate goal.

UCF was held to only one shot on goal, a remarkable achievement against a team that powerful.

"When you can hold a team the quality of Central Florida to one shot, that's extraordinary," Dorrance said. "We certainly can't count on the fact that we're just going to give up one shot. I think Wisconsin has all sorts of talent, so they are going to try to create some chances. We just don't want to give them easy chances, and I hope we play as well defensively against them as we did against UCF."

Whatever happens, the game will certainly not be easy. Wisconsin comes into this weekend ranked eighth in the country, with a 15-2-2 record. Though they had some trouble in the beginning of the year, losing to Colorado College 4-0 and then to William and Mary 2-1, the Badgers rebounded strongly. Since those two losses they have beaten high-ranked Barry, 2-0, and Central Florida, 2-1.

"I think they are playing their best soccer now," Dorrance said. "In a way I liken their performance to that of our men's team. They struggled a bit at times earlier in the year, but they seem to have gotten things together recently, and now they're on a roll. I know how our men's team feels now — they feel absolutely unbeatable — and I think Wisconsin has that same kind of enthusiasm and confidence. I think they are going to be a very difficult team to play right now."

The other matchup will be a close call as well, though State is favored to win.

State comes into this weekend as the No. 2 seed in the tournament, with an 18-1-3 record. The lone loss was at the hands of Massachusetts, who beat the Wolfpack 3-2 in Raleigh.

California has already beaten the No. 3 seed, Colorado College, en route to its Final Four position. As of now the Bears stand in the No. 7 spot at 16-4-2 after occupying the No. 2 spot much of the season's first half.

Duke game ends football year

By ANDREW PODOLSKY
Assistant Sports Editor

Well, it's finally here! Parties will commence, beers will be swilled, and, hey, break out the champagne! Football season is over!

Mack Brown — indeed, all of Chapel Hill — can breathe a sigh of relief as the worst football season in North Carolina history draws to a close Saturday.

The 1-9 Tar Heels will slam the book on the 1988 disaster with a tough game as they invade (all right, maybe they won't invade) Wallace Wade Stadium in Durham to take on the 6-3-1 Duke Blue Devils at 12:08 p.m. Of course, that time means that it will be a regional television game.

No other UNC team has lost so many games. No other UNC team has had such a difficult time on defense. But then again, no other head coach with such a dismal record has been able to tell so many jokes about it.

While a North Carolina victory is unlikely, it is not impossible. The Tar Heels actually have many things going for them.

For one, Duke's coach, Steve

Spurrier, is suspended for the game due to some less-than-prudent comments about an official's call that allowed N.C. State to tie the Blue Devils in the waning minutes last week. So Spurrier's more-than-able assistants will have to helm the Devils.

Also, the Tar Heels are coming off one of their best efforts of the year, losing in the final seconds to a tough Virginia team 27-24. Finally, UNC is playing an opponent that will allow the game to fall into a high-scoring affair — the only kind of game the Tar Heels are going to win considering their defensive statistics.

But first, North Carolina will have to contend with a potent Duke offense led by quarterback Anthony Dilweg (3,462 yards passing, 21 TDs) and wide receiver Clarkston Hines (60 catches, 963 yard, 9 TDs).

It is an offense that has put an average of 29 points on the board on the strength of 351 yards passing per game and 110 yards rushing per game. No team, not even Clemson, has kept Duke under 16 points this season.

What's more, this offense is coming off a game in which they racked up

510 yards and 29 first downs in a chaotic 43-43 tie against N.C. State.

UNC's main problem will be trying to stop the Dilweg-Hines combination, which will be a tough task, considering the Tar Heel secondary yields 219 yards passing per game. But the problem goes deeper than that. Duke has the two top receivers in the ACC as tailback Roger Boone leads the conference in receptions with 62, while Hines leads the ACC in yards with 963.

But beyond Boone and Hines, Dilweg has many other targets: split end Walter Jones (36 catches, 178 yds.), tight end Dave Colona and fullback John Rymiszewski. In contrast, only one Tar Heel offensive player, Randy Marriott, has over 20 receptions.

The Tar Heel passing game has been faltering of late, but thanks to Kennard Martin, the running game is once again dangerous.

The stage is set for a big day for the sophomore tailback. He needs 145 yards to become the 19th back in UNC history to crack the 1,000-yard barrier. UNC's current total of 18 1,000-yard performers is the most of any school in the country.

Divers key men's swim win

By NEIL AMATO
Staff Writer

If early-season dual meets are any indication of how the North Carolina swimmers will fare, then the ACC competition had better watch out.

The Tar Heel men's team, largely aided by strong diving performances, defeated Maryland, 169-74, and upended Florida State, 129-114. The women's squad demolished Florida State, 207.5-92.5, and crushed Maryland, 235-64, but fell to Southern Methodist in the last event, 151-149.

The two men's victories, the first ones of the regular season, came without the help of last year's ACC swimmer of the year, sophomore John Davis, who had a pulled muscle.

Three divers — senior Andy Hunter, junior Ted Hautau and sophomore Nunzio Esposto — keyed the men's teams with fine early-season diving. Hunter placed first in the three-meter competition and second in the one-meter. Hautau took third in the three-meter and fourth in the one-meter. The one-meter champ was Esposto, who also got second in the three-meter.

"The divers are an integral part of what we're trying to accomplish," UNC coach Frank Comfort said.

Captains Chris Himebauch and Jed Guenther, sophomore Ralph Vick and freshman Chris Languell all handed in quality swims for the Tar Heels.

The senior Himebauch won the 50-yard freestyle in 20.47, edging out FSU's Matt Muller, who swam a 21.06. Guenther, a junior from Berwyn, Pa., captured first place in the 100 free with a time of 45.60. Vick swam two personal bests, placing second in both the 200 and 500 freestyles. Languell, in his first regular-season competition, won the 200 fly in 1:51.35 and also swam the butterfly leg on a second-place medley relay team.

The women's team was led by Hannah Turlish, Melanie Buddemeyer and Wendy Powers, each of whom are All-Americans.

Turlish, a sophomore from Lewiston, Maine, stroked to NCAA qualifying times in the 200 (1:49.00) and 500 freestyle (a pool-record 4:48.98). Buddemeyer, a senior who sat out last season with an injury, returned to set a pool record in the 200 fly and qualify for the NCAA's with-a-clocking of 2:00.38.

Powers, a senior co-captain, won the 200 individual medley, placed second in the 200 back and finished third in the 100 backstroke in a time of 59.11.

Despite the close loss to Southern Methodist, Powers was still optimistic about the '88-89 women's team.

Volleyball heads into ACC event

By DOUG HOOGERVORST
Staff Writer

UNC's volleyball team travels to Atlanta this weekend to participate in the ACC Tournament. The Tar Heels are the ACC's No. 2 seed, finishing their regular season with a 5-1 conference record and 20-7 overall mark.

The Tar Heels are also ranked ninth in the Southern Region.

Coach Peggy Bradley-Doppes thinks this year's team will have a successful tourney. "The girls understand that we're a good team but so is everybody at this (ACC) level," she said. "The conference tournament starts everything over again. In the past we've gone in saying, 'Yeah, we'll play good. We'll win.'"

"And it's not that way at all. The kids are going in this year thinking we've got something to prove and it's all business."

N.C. State, last year's tournament champion, returns as the No. 1 seed, with a perfect 6-0 ACC record. UNC's first foe will be Georgia Tech, Saturday at 4:00.
