

Living Colour will make a Chapel Hill appearance in Memorial Hall Jan. 27

Get ready: It's Living Colour, Petra, Winston and Murray

From staff reports

Just because all the students went home over the holidays doesn't mean that things aren't still happening in Chapel Hill.

In case you haven't heard, Jon Bon Jovi and the boys in the band will be at the Smith Center Feb. 18 at 8 p.m. Tickets, at $17.50 a pop, went on sale last Saturday at 7 a.m.

But don't get excited — tickets are sold out and have been for awhile.

Other area concerts include Living Colour Jan. 27, Petra Jan. 28, George Winston Feb. 4 and 5, the Budapest Symphony Orchestra Feb. 13 and Anne Murray Feb. 18.

Tickets for the Living Colour show in Memorial Auditorium are selling fast at the Carolina Union Box Office, especially the special ones for UNC students at $9.50 apiece. Other poor slob can purchase theirs at $10.50 today or $12.50 on the day of the show.

The opening act will be The Big Dipper. The best description of Living Colour's sound is that they "straddle funk and hard rock." Get your ticket quick to judge for yourself.

Petra will bring their On Fire! tour to Memorial Hall at 6:30 and 9 p.m. Tickets are available at the Sign of the Fish Bookstores in Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill for $11 until the day of the show, then $13 the day of the show.

Group tickets are available at $9.50 for groups of 10 or more. For more information call 919-544-6304. Petra's On Fire! is being heralded as one of Christian music's most significant releases in recent years. Since 1974, Petra has released 10 other albums, winning many awards and receiving many honors, including Grammy nominations and Dove awards.

Local favorite George Winston will make his return here with his Winter Concert in Memorial at 7:30 p.m. both days. UNC students can purchase tickets for $12 from the Carolina Union Box Office, and the general public can buy them for $14.50 each.

Collection baskets for canned goods will be in the lobby in support of the Orange Congregations in Mission. Winston will be performing seasonal songs from recorded and unrecorded pieces.

The Budapest Symphony will perform with American solo pianist Leonard Pennario at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Call the Union Box Office at 962-1449 for ticket information.

Canadian songbird Anne Murray will be at the Greensboro Coliseum at 8 p.m. Tickets are $18.75 each and are on sale already at the Coliseum Box Office and at all Ticketron locations.

The Ticketron charge-it number is 800-543-3041. Have Visa/Mastercard/Amex number ready and be prepared to wait. But being a Carolina student, you're used to that, right?

Struggling Tar Heels look to halt streak vs. No. 1 Duke

By DAVE GLENN
Sports Editor

It's finally time for the showdown that college hoops fans everywhere have been waiting for since the first preseason poll hit the presses.

The Duke Blue Devils, ranked number one in the nation, carry a perfect 13-0 record into tonight's contest in Cameron Indoor Stadium against the 14-3 Tar Heels.

The 12th-ranked Tar Heels must bounce back from Sunday's 106-83 loss at Virginia to improve on their 1-1 record in ACC competition. The Blue Devils boast a 3-0 ACC mark entering the game, with victories over Wake Forest, Virginia and Maryland.

The Duke squad also has road victories over Kentucky and Miami to its credit in non-conference play.

Gone from last year's Duke team are defensive ace Billy King and sharpshooter Kevin Strickland, but a great deal of talent remains for coach Mike Krzyzewski. This is a team with a real chance to reach the Final Four for the third time in four years.

But, for now, the Blue Devils must face a Tar Heel squad with revenge in its eyes. The 1987-88 UNC campaign marked the first time in more than 20 years that the Tar Heels lost to Duke three times in one season, including a 96-81 embarrassment at Duke and a 65-61 squeaker in the ACC tournament in March. Though the Tar Heels hold a 105-72 all-time advantage in this series, which began way back in 1920, the record stands at 6 wins and 6 losses from 1984-89. But the revenge factor alone will not be enough for the Tar Heels to stop the Duke string of victories.

Dean Smith's UNC squad, already faced with the absence of senior guard Jeff Lebo because of an ankle injury he sustained in the Virginia game, must contend with the presence of Duke All-American forward Danny Ferry. The 6-foot-10 senior, who scored 58 points in one game earlier this season, presents a matchup problem for any defense — but a particularly big one for the Tar Heels.

If you like numbers, try these on for size. Ferry is averaging 22.7 points per game, best in the ACC. He is shooting 60.1 percent from the field, second only to teammate Alaa Abdalnaby. He also ranks in the top 10 in the ACC in free throw percentage (71.1), rebounding (7.1), assists (5.0) and even three-point field goal percentage (44.4). Is there anything this guy can't do?

Well, no. Ferry's game is a near-perfect balance of inside and outside basketball. He's strong enough to get off the inside shot, quick enough to drive to the hoop, and smooth enough to find the net with any shot in the 18-22 foot range. His quickness, strength and height combine to make him a force on the boards and his great vision on the floor enables him to create shots for his teammates with his impressive passing ability.

Guarding him? Well, this is a major problem for the Tar Heels. Smith could try 6-10 center Scott Williams, but he is a step too slow to follow Ferry on the outside. Sophomore forward Rick Fox is another possibility, but he could foul out in the first half if he had to guard the big man. Steve Bucknall, arguably the team's best defender, has been consistently assigned to the opposing team's point guard and will probably take on Quin Snyder. J.R. Reid? C'mon, Ferry would score 60.

Whatever Smith decides to do, keep an eye on this matchup tonight — knowing that only one thing is for sure. Whoever does attempt to guard Ferry will need, and get, help from his teammates.

In the backcourt, the Blue Devils are led by senior point man Quin Snyder and off-guard Phil Henderson. Snyder is second in the ACC in assists, but has struggled with his outside shooting this season. Henderson, a 6-4 shooting guard, is fourth on the Duke squad with 10.7 ppg and is hitting at a 54 percent clip from the field.

Believe it or not, the Blue Devils can be just as impressive at the defensive end of the floor. Though they are a notch below last year's defensive prowess, they still have managed to force opponents into committing more than 20 turnovers per game so far this year.

Before an important Tar Heel possession, watch for the "palms down" motion the Duke players use to get themselves psyched for a particular defensive series. The players on the court, almost in unison, crouch down and slap their hands on the court in a symbolic display of the concept of team defense, something the Tar Heels have been seriously lacking in recent weeks.

	UNC	Edge	Duke
Backcourt	Jeff Lebo will definitely not play. The huge burden falls on King Rice to create shots for his teammates and for Steve Bucknall to hit from outside.		Point guard Quin Snyder has struggled from the field, but he is a good assist and steal man. 6-4 junior Phil Henderson is good for 10 points per game.
Frontcourt	The return of J.R. inside has helped, not disrupted, the Tar Heels. S. Williams must hit the boards and K. Madden must start taking smart shots again.		Danny Ferry, everybody's All-American at forward, has plenty of help. Robert Brickley joins 6-10 freshman Christian Laettner on an imposing front line.
Depth	Jeff Denny and H. Davis must take over in Lebo's absence. Pete Chilcutt has become a force on the glass. Rick Fox has been more up than down.		Alaa Abdalnaby has become a scorer on the inside. Senior forward John Smith is a solid shooter and tough in the paint. Greg Koubek is struggling.
Defense	Virginia found the answer to the trapping pressure defense. Fox, Williams and Bucknall must be physical without fouling out of the game early.		Even without Billy King, they can play tough defense. More importantly they work very, very well as a unit. Brickley is a shot blocker. Solid all around.
Coaching	Before I get hung or charged with heresy, I will name but a few reasons. Bucknall guarding Crotty instead of Morgan. A slow team full-court pressing.		Mike Krzyzewski, 187-84 in his nine years at Duke, gets the first nod over Dean Smith on these pages. He gets more out of his players. And recruits.

Thompson vows to continue fight against Proposition 42

From Associated Press reports

WASHINGTON — Georgetown coach John Thompson said he will take no more symbolic walks off the basketball court to protest a new NCAA rule on scholarships, but he left open the possibility he would continue his demonstration by skipping the Hoyas' game at Providence tonight.

"I have no more intentions of going to the bench and walking off," he said. "I think that point was made. But I will not go to the bench until I am satisfied. I just have to feel sincerely that we are moving in the right direction."

Thompson attracted national attention when he walked off the court Saturday night before Georgetown's game against Boston College. He was protesting Proposal 42, which is designed to create more stringent entrance and scholarship requirements for incoming freshmen.

Thompson refused to say exactly what changes or actions he was seeking. He did say he plans to talk to some "people of influence" in the next few days, but said he has no intention of placing any demands on anyone. He also refused to specify with whom he would be talking.

"I don't want to put someone in a position where I'm saying 'If you don't do this, I'm not going to go back on the bench,'" he said. "I'm trying to be as reasonable as I possibly can be, and permit those who realize it might be a mistake to do something about it."

Proposal 42, which is to go into effect in 1990, would prevent high school students who meet only part of the NCAA's criteria from receiving athletic scholarships while they sit out their first year of collegiate eligibility under Proposition 48.

Thompson has claimed the proposal is discriminatory because of the emphasis it places on tests that Thompson and educators claim are biased against people from low socioeconomic classes.

Southeastern Conference Commissioner Harvey Schiller, one of the most vocal proponents of Prop 42, now admits the legislation needs to be "more sensitive and understanding."

Thompson questioned the balloting process used in adopting the controversial rule. Comparing a computer printout that showed how each school voted with information he had gathered from individual athletic directors, he said he noted a discrepancy.

"I wonder whether people understood clearly what they were doing about something that is very significant," he said.
