Subway chain opens 5th area franchise

By MARIA BATISTA
Staff Writer

As part of the growing chain of Subway Sandwich and Salad franchises, a new store opened at Timberlyne Shopping Center on Weaver Dairy Road Jan. 30.

This store is the fifth one in the area and was built to accommodate the increasing amount of business in the area.

Richard Bass, manager of three area Subways, said, "We're growing at a faster rate than Domino's or Pizza Hut — in the past two years we have doubled our rate of growth."

Bass attributed the increase in business to the burst of growth in Chapel Hill.

"In a good week, we serve anywhere from 1,600 to 2,000 sandwiches," he said.

The new store primarily serves area businesses and high school students and seats 24 people, Bass said. The busiest time of day for the new store is lunch time, he said.

Anita Whitmire, co-owner of the five Subways in this area, said the opening of the new store does not affect any of the other Subways in the area. The Franklin Street store, now under renovation, is scheduled to reopen Feb. 17.

Whitmire, her husband Peter Slomiany, his brother Michael Slomiany and his wife Kimberly own the five area Subways.

The renovation of the Franklin Street store was from the ground up, Whitmire said. "We took up seven layers of flooring — it was about a foot deep. The store really hadn't been remodeled at all (until now)," she said.

The Franklin Street store is the third-smallest in the chain of more than 3,000 stores, Whitmire said. The remodeled store does not have seating because of its large amount of pedestrian traffic; it does have new equipment that will increase productivity by 50 percent, she said.

All of the Subways do a lot of business, Whitmire said. "It's going great guns. It's amazing to me — the people who come in are great," she said. "The UNC students are the backbone of our business. We employ many students. I couldn't ask for better people to work with (and serve)."

Subway was started in 1965 by college student Fred DeLuca and Dr. Peter Buck. After a slow start, the business grew, and in 1974, the first Subway franchise was sold. Today there are stores in four countries, including Bahrain.

Target grade

Committee took a poll of the students, and I believe that the amount of students in favor of the proposal was 96 percent," said Bill Hildebolt, Special Interests Committee chairman.

But the Faculty Council felt that last year's proposal needed more work, Hildebolt said.

"They didn't really come up with anything concrete," he said. "They thought that it would degrade the grading system and make life too easy for students."

"They thought that it would erode the benefits of the grading system, giving students a free ride."

The revised proposal should be more appealing to the council, Hildebolt said. "We think that the biggest selling point of the new system would be the reduction of the amount of hours that the students could take," he said. "We didn't take a poll asking the students about the reduction, but we feel the benefits will outweigh it."

The chairman of the Educational Policy Committee, nutrition professor John Anderson, encouraged the members of the Special Interests Committee to pursue the proposal, said Chris Landgraaf, a Special Interests Committee member.

"We feel that the target system will enhance some students' attitude towards these classes and encourage them to take courses outside of their major," Hildebolt said. "I think that some teachers feel that there are too many students taking these classes pass/fail and they become apathetic themselves."

Students questioned Tuesday said they were in favor of the proposal. Joseph Holt, a freshman business administration major from Fayetteville, said, "I don't see this system as causing any detriment to the grading system, as long as it's applicable to the grading system and students only use it in classes where they deem it necessary."

"I think that it's a great system," said John Cocking, a junior recreation administration major from Atlanta. "If you set a goal and you reach it, you should be rewarded."
