	UNC	Edge	N.C.State
Backcourt	Jeff Lebo is back and healthy, but his shot is not. He'll have to start hitting the treys. Steve Bucknall has been drilling the open three-pointer consistently.		Rodney Monroe had a rough game vs. UNC last time around, but he's the ACC's best outside shooter. Point guard Chris Corchiani is a creator on offense.
Frontcourt	J.R. Reid is too much for any Wolfpack player to handle. Scott Williams will hit the boards at both ends. Kevin Madden is a machine in the 8-16 foot range.		Chucky Brown, a great square-up jumpshooter, leads the ACC in rebounding. Brian Howard goes inside and outside well. Avie Lester is physical in the middle.
Depth	King Rice is a capable point man. Pete Chilcutt has been a consistent force on the boards. Rick Fox must play in control. Hubert Davis can hit the jumper.		Kelsey Weems is a feisty back-up at the point and a good one. Brian D'Amico is nothing more than a large body. Freshman Tom Gugliotta has played well of late.
Defense	The Tar Heels have been giving up a lot of points lately, partly due to the quick pace of their games. When they're in a set defense, they can be very tough.	EVEN	The Wolfpack has given up more than 80 points four times this year. They've lost three of them. Corchiani pressures the ball well. Howard, Lester can block a shot.
Coaching	Dean Smith has won five regular season contests in a row against Coach V and the Pack. He's 2-2 in ACC road competition this year. Not bad, but not good either.		Coach V gave his guys a bunch of cupcake opponents early in the year. So they started to think they were good. Now, they're 2-4 on the road. But 12-0 at home.

Heels visit ice-cold Pack

By ANDREW PODOLSKY
Assistant Sports Editor

Well, it's safe to say, both teams will be ready for this one.

Yes, the sixth-ranked North Carolina men's basketball team travels about 35 minutes down the road to face the 17th-ranked N.C. State Wolfpack in a nationally televised matchup (WRAL, 9 p.m.).

These two Triangle teams are both pretty cold right now, heading into the game with less steam than a Lenior ice cream sandwich. Tonight's game is an important one, however, as it opens the second half of the ACC regular season.

Amazingly, State and UNC, tied for the ACC lead at the halfway point with identical 5-2 conference records, retained the top spots in the league despite losing their last games. Weird conference this year, huh?

State, 14-4 heading into tonight, is on a two-game losing streak. The Pack shot an ice-cold 44.4 percent from the field Saturday night to allow unranked DePaul to come away with an 81-74 upset. Earlier last week, State shot an even worse 33.3 percent from the field en route to getting stomped by Virginia, 91-74.

A quick lesson here: shooting 33.3 and 44.4 percent from the field is not the way to become a national contender, Coach V. But judging from the trend of the last few games, can we expect the Pack to shoot 55.5 percent tonight?

I think not. But UNC, now 18-4 on the season, didn't manage much better in its last outing, dropping (and I mean dropping) a 85-82 decision to Clemson. The Tar Heels shot an equally unimpressive 45 percent from the field in that game last Wednesday night. You may recall Jeff Lebo shooting a searing 0-for-the-day (or 0-7 for those of you keeping stat books out there).

But now that the Tar Heels have had more than a week to review, study and generally cry over that game's statistics (it was only the second time Clemson had defeated UNC in their last 20 meetings), they should be more than ready to break out of the blocks and put forth a good showing against the Wolfpack in Reynolds Coliseum tonight.

It should also help that State shooters can't hit the blind side of a barn with a double-barreled shotgun (note the use of farm analogy to stay with the N.C. State motif).

The last time these two squads met (January 21st in the Smith Center), UNC snapped a 10-game Wolfpack winning streak with an 84-81 thrilling win. The Wolfpack staged an almost amazing comeback in that game, but when Chucky Brown's three-point attempt at the buzzer fell short, the Tar Heels escaped with the win and a tie for the ACC lead.

Since then, the teams have been pretty lukewarm. While the Wolfpack has gone 2-2 in four games, the Tar Heels have managed a respectable 2-1 ledger. Somebody should break out of that slump tonight.

And tonight's result will have a large effect on who will be in the driver's seat to win the ACC regular season with only six games left to go. But what about the Wolfpack players? Well, it's the same bunch that came to Chapel Hill three weeks ago, but here's a refresher course.

In the frontcourt, State is led by 6-8 forward Chucky (the rebounding maniac) Brown (averaging 15.3 ppg). Brown has been consistent lately, pumping in 18 against Virginia and 17 against Clemson.

On the other hand, Brown's teammate in the paint, Brian (Mr. Inconsistency) Howard (13.9 ppg) is cold. He's only scored 12 points in the last two games. But this same Brian Howard sparked the Wolfpack comeback last time State faced UNC, leading his team with 20 points on the strength of some dead-eye three-point shooting.

If State is to win, both Brown and Howard will have to be hitting on all cylinders. That the State backcourt is a force to be reckoned with is no secret. In three words, it's Monroe, Corchiani and Weems who could give the Tar Heels fits. These three have combined for 73 points in the last two games.

Rodney (the gun) Monroe is State's most prolific scorer (20.7 ppg), while the pesky and often irritating Chris (the rug rat) Corchiani leads NCSU in everything else — assists (165) and steals (58).

Kelsey (the quicksilver) Weems is just, well, Kelsey Weems. He's extremely quick and a fastbreak explosion waiting to detonate. If the Pack can shake its shooting woes, look for an upset tonight. If not, the Tar Heels can win with only 40 — no, make that 30 — percent shooting from the field.

Harris picks UNC

From staff reports

The University of North Carolina on Tuesday received a verbal commitment from high school basketball player Kenny Harris of Petersburg, Va.

Harris, a 6-foot-2 guard, made his announcement at a news conference at Petersburg High School. He picked the Tar Heels over Virginia and Virginia Commonwealth.

Harris is averaging 27 points and five assists per game on a 12-4 team that is ranked No. 1 in the Central District of Virginia Group AAA League.

Harris joins 7-1 center Matt Weststrom of Maude Creek High School in Katy, Texas and 6-7 forward Henrik Rodl of West Germany (who played two years ago at Chapel Hill High School's state championship team) on Dean Smith's 1989 list of top recruits.
