| | UNC | Edge | Old Dominion |
|-------------------|--|---|---|
| Backcourt | Jeff Lebo is still searching for his three-pointer, but he gets closer every game. He's doing everything else well, too. Steve Bucknall is a well-rounded player. |  | Darrin McDonald is a penetrator, not a shooter. The 6-3 junior is hitting for 12.4 ppg. Point man Donald Grant handles the ball well, but plays conservatively. |
| Frontcourt | J.R. Reid had only 10 points vs. Virginia, but his presence opens up shots for everyone else. Scott Williams is intimidating inside, K. Madden is more up than down. |  | Chris Gatling averages 21.9 ppg and 9.1 rpg. He's a strong post-up man. Anthony Carver is a scorer inside and outside. Garrick Davis is their garbage man inside. |
| Depth | Rick Fox played extremely well vs. Virginia. He's a creator on offense, something UNC needed. Pete Chilcutt hits the boards, King Rice runs the fastbreak very well. |  | Ricardo Leonard, a 6-7, 230-pound forward, plays a physical game inside. Backup point guard Terrence Jacobs is a good set-up man, but not an outside threat. |
| Defense | The Tar Heels came together defensively against Virginia. Reid and Williams had three blocks each. Bucknall and Rice pressure the ball well. Need a team effort. |  | Gatling leads the way here for the Monarchs, too. The 6-9 center is averaging 2.1 blocked shots per game. Elsewhere, there is little to stop UNC inside. |
| Coaching | Dean Smith has his Tar Heels ready for another weeknight road game. This time the competition isn't quite as tough. Sir Smith has 657 career wins. Amazing. |  | Tom Young, who has 495 career victories, is 61-50 at Old Dominion. Young came up big when he found an unhappy Gatling at Pitt two years ago. |

Oden takes center stage even before opening tip

By NATALIE SEKICKY
Staff Writer

The next time you attend a UNC women's basketball game this season, you'll get a chance to witness the talents of Merlaine Oden, the Tar Heels' 6-foot-1 senior center from Decatur, Ga.

A quick glance at her statistics tells the story. Oden leads the team in scoring (at 11.8 points per game) and rebounding (9.0 boards per game). On the scoring end, Oden is the 13th-leading scorer in UNC history with 834 points. Her rebounding numbers are good enough for second place in the ACC this year and ninth place on the all-time UNC list.

And, oh yes, she occasionally sings the national anthem before games.

"I sang it one night after we came back from Christmas because the band wasn't here," Oden said. "My teammates said they were inspired and my coach asked me to sing it again."

Oden, an RTVMP major who sings in the Black Student Movement Gospel Choir in her spare time, hopes to sing professionally someday.

But vocal talents aside, Oden's play — as her stats suggest — is crucial to the North Carolina game plan this season. Those figures are even more impressive when you consider that they are a center's production on a fastbreak team.

A closer look at Oden's numbers shows steady improvement throughout her Tar Heel career. Her scoring and rebounding averages have grown each season and her role has changed a great deal since the arrival of head coach Sylvia Hatchell three years ago.

"In the past, as long as I played defense and got the boards it was cool," Oden said. "Then coach Hatchell came in and she wanted me to shoot."

Oden insists that shooting poses a problem for her, and she has struggled somewhat this year, hitting 45.1 percent from the field and 61.8 percent from the line this season. Oden's shooting troubles do not stem from a lack of effort, though.

"I've been really working on my shot. I have changed my shot probably about five times since I've been here," she said.

Despite her present success, Oden's start in basketball was far from ideal. She credits peer pressure for her decision to go out for her eighth-grade team and said her initial reaction to the game was not good.

"I did not like it," Oden said. "My coach used to fuss at me all the time. I was so goofy I couldn't do anything."

Fortunately for the Tar Heels, Oden's attitude and aptitude changed eventually. When it came time for college, she chose UNC because of its academic reputation, beautiful campus, friendly athletes and one other very important reason — the Carolina-blue track that encircles Fetzer Field.

"I remember standing out there and saying 'That track is the same color as the sky!'" Oden explained. "I was so excited. Little did I know what that track would put me through."

Perhaps even more important to the Tar Heels this season is the leadership role "Mo," as her teammates call her, provides for a team that has only two seniors but six freshmen, three of whom start.

"Sometimes it's hard for me to realize that some young girls do look up to me," Oden said. "But I know it's something I have to accept."

When asked to choose her favorite part of playing basketball, Oden indicated that her teammates take precedence over all else. "My teammates are so supportive," she said. "There are times when I lack confidence and my teammates will say 'C'mon Merlaine, you got it.' They'll really support me and make me feel like I'm needed."

Although the Tar Heels are struggling in her final season, Oden is positive in her evaluation of the team. "I have a lot of hope in this team," she said. "I firmly believe that, if not this year, next year and the year after that this Carolina team is going to be the stuff. I'm excited about that."

It looks like the Tar Heels have the right person singing their praises.
