

Suit up for spring with the latest fashions

By CHERYL ALLEN
Staff Writer

With only a few weeks left until spring break, it's time to begin the dreaded search for a bathing suit. So here are a few fashion pointers to ensure your fabulous beach debut in '89.

One of the main new fashions this year is the revival of "pucker," a textured, stretchy fabric popular in the 70s, said Billy Dillon, owner of Beach Connection on Franklin Street.

"It looks wrinkled and is very comfortable," Dillon said. The pucker material is available in both bikinis and one-piece bathing suits and is replacing the wetsuit look of last season, he added.

"The monokini (bathing suits that look like a bikini but are connected at the sides) has also gone by the wayside this season," Dillon said.

"Triangle-top bikinis seem to be coming back," he said. "They fit some girls better."

But don't throw away last year's bandeau bikini. "The two-piece bandeau style is always going to be around, I think," said Jennifer Taylor, department sales manager for Belk-Leggett at University Mall.

Bandeau bikinis have a strip of material that goes straight across the chest, often without straps. One of the new innovations in bandeau bathing suits this year is a little metal "V" in the middle of the band, Dillon said.

Both Taylor and Dillon agree that neon colors are making a comeback in 1989. And Taylor said Belk also has an abundance of pastel florals this season, as well as a few styles adorned with bows.

Both Beach Connection and Belk sell more bikinis than one-piece bathing suits to college-age students. "We sell more one-pieces to our older customers," Dillon said.

Taylor said Belk had a couple of halter-style bikinis, as well as tank-top bikinis. Many of the two-pieces have an elasticized band around the waist. Some styles have Velcro at the sides so they can be tightened or loosened to appear more like a string bikini, she said.

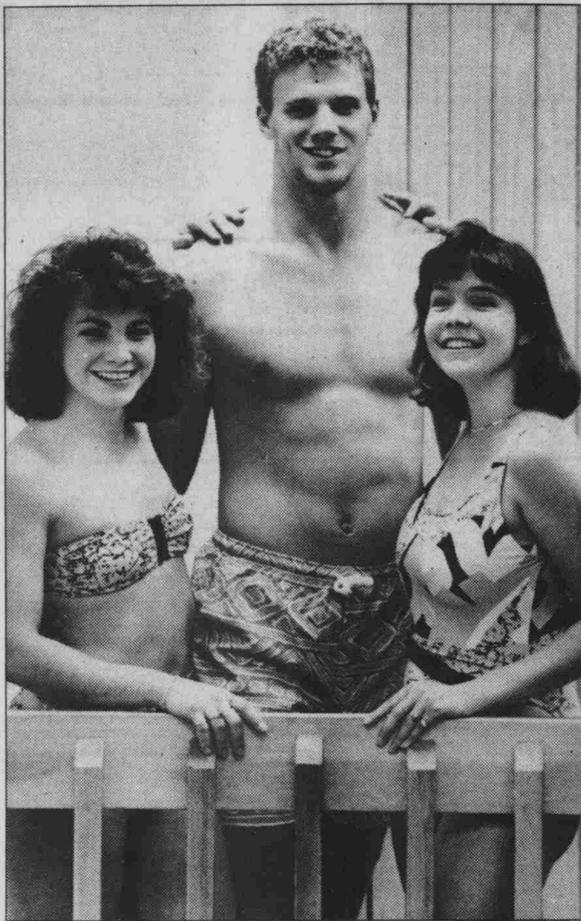

"The high-cut leg is still in this year, as is the high-waisted bikini, which is more flattering for someone with a little bit of a tummy," Taylor said.

Taylor also noted that the hang tags on this year's suits often depict more full-figured women, meaning that suits are designed for girls with larger chests.

The average cost for a women's swimming suit this season is around $45. Men are a bit luckier — their swimsuits average in the low $30 range.

Dillon said neon colors such as fluorescent orange, yellow and green predominate in men's swimwear this season.

And surf companies have come out with a new quick-drying material for guys called "tactel," he said. After getting out of the water, tactel dries in about four to five minutes because the water runs off it, he said.

Make U.S. history in outdoor drama

By ANDREW LAWLER
Staff Writer

Regional auditions for 15 outdoor dramas will be held at UNC on March 11.

Outdoor drama is that particularly American form of drama recounting various heroic adventures in American history. Daniel Boone, Tecumseh and ol' Honest Abe are among those profiled in these huge, usually musical, extravaganzas. The productions are normally located near the area where the historic events occurred and serve as almost a living tour guide to the locale.

North Carolina serves as home to no fewer than eight of these pageants, from "Unto these Hills" at Cherokee to Boone's "The Liberty Cart," not to mention America's longest running and most famous outdoor drama.

"The Lost Colony," written by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Paul Green (a name not unfamiliar to North Carolina theater) began performances on July 4, 1937, and it has since run for 48 seasons. The play, which has been presented more than 2,600 times, details the story of Sir Walter Raleigh's famous lost colony.

According to legend, a band of English pioneers settled on the coast in 1587 and set up a village. However, upon Raleigh's return, the village was deserted. The disappearance has never been accounted for. In "The Lost Colony," the possible answers are explored through song, dialogue and dance.

Other plays that will be cast from these auditions are "Elizabeth II," "Horn in the West,"

"Strike at the Wind" and "The Sword of Peace," all held in North Carolina. Shows outside the state will include Ohio's "Blue Jacket," "Tecumseh" and "Trumpet in the Land," Kentucky's "The Legend of Daniel Boone"; Pennsylvania's "The Pennsylvania Renaissance Faire"; and Indiana's "Young Abe Lincoln." Rounding out the list are West Virginia's "Theatre West Virginia" and Oklahoma's "Trail of Tears."

Employment in an outdoor drama production usually lasts between nine and 12 weeks. Companies often add theater and musical theater classes, as well as mounting smaller cabaret-like productions. Pay ranges from production to production. In the case of "The Lost Colony," actors earn from $110 to $200 a week. With some outdoor dramas it is possible to supplement this salary by doing technical work with the company.

Interested applicants must be at least 18 years old and have had some theatrical training. Actors will perform one 60-second monologue and may perform another if called back. Singers must prepare one song and bring music, while those interested in dance will go through an audition with modern, ballet and folk dancing. People interested in technical theater are likewise encouraged to apply.

Auditions are held under the auspices of UNC's Institute of Outdoor Drama.

Applications and further information are available from the Institute of Outdoor Drama, located in Graham Memorial.

Tax Seminar For Foreign Students & Scholars

MONDAY FEB. 20, 1989
The Great Hall

STUDENTS: 4:00-6:00 p.m.
SCHOLARS: 7:00-9:00 p.m.

Kevin Martin, student body president, and Neil Riemann, speaker of Student Congress, both said they support the referendums, which will change the dates the student attorney general is appointed and Student Congress undergoes its annual budget process.

Martin said he did not see any reason why these referendums would be controversial. "They are needed to make student government run more efficiently again."

Amending the dates for the student attorney general will mean that the outgoing president will appoint the incoming student attorney general, allowing the new attorney general time to choose a staff and prepare for the upcoming year, Riemann said. The same time factor is involved in Student Congress' budget setting process, he said. The final congress budget hearing has been in April in past years.

The other referendum that would require a change in the constitution proposes the creation of the office of student body vice president. The vice president would be able to take the place of the president at many University functions that need a student representative.

"I really support that referendum," Martin said. "Student government needs another person who can represent the school. I can't be in two places at once."

The office would not receive a salary at first because the requirements of the job cannot yet be fully gauged, Martin said. The remaining referendum involves changing the way in which a portion of summer school fees are spent.

About 20 percent of the fees summer students pay is not spent during the summer but used to support many groups that only function during the fall and spring semesters, Martin said.

Passing the referendum would change the allocation of fees so that the remaining 20 percent would be channeled into the Carolina Union during the summer, he said. The fees would be used specifically for summer programs and entertainment, allowing summer students to get the most from their fees.
