Sports

Ambition opens Gates to fencing

By CHRISTINA FROHOCK

Not many people take fencing seriously. In fact, at UNC there are probably only a select few who even consider it a sport.

However, Cheryl Gates, co-captain of the women's fencing team, takes a lot of pride in what she does. "I'm very proud of fencing, so I don't like it when people make fun of the sport," she said.

Gates, originally from Burlington, N.C., moved to New Jersey right before high school. She said she never intended to fence and only began in order to win a dare.

"In ninth grade I was going to try out for basketball but I had a little problem with geometry so my mom wanted me to stay back," the senior physical education major said.

"The next year my chemistry teacher was the men's fencing coach, and he dared me to do it because I was doing pretty well in school. I don't take dares lightly, so I did it."

Gates began fencing during her sophomore year in high school and has continued to excel since. She was recruited by North Carolina and Ohio State — an accomplishment in itself. Gates is a very strong-willed person whose ultimate dream was to come to UNC. She added "So when my guidance counselor told me I could never get in, I said 'Watch me!' "

Well, she did make it to UNC and has been fencing since her freshman year. She has been a co-captain since

Miller is understanding and fair. "He has a policy that if you have an exam or something important to do, then you're excused from practice - no questions asked," she said. "Academics always comes first."

Gates said that because fencing is a non-revenue sport, it doesn't matter what year you are. "If you have the ability to fence, keep up with the team and to keep up with all our workouts, then you're welcome to be on the team as long as you put in your 100 percent," she said.

Gates has obviously been giving the sport her all lately. So far this year, her record is 43-14. At her best match at Penn State, she lost only one match on the day.

She said she has great expectations for the rest of the season. "It's my ultimate goal to make it individually to the NCAAs but the first step is making it individually to the regionals," Gates said. "I did that my sophomore year."

Gates also pointed out that, while fencing is a team sport, every match is one-on-one. "You have to have enough pride in yourself and enough self-confidence to want to win when you go out there on the strip," she said. "The team members are always there to support you but you have to do it on your own."

After graduation, Gates would like to go on to graduate school at UNC in the physical education teaching program. Although she does not plan to specialize in fencing, she would like

Basketball

Once again, North Carolina just had too much inside strength for an opponent. The Tar Heels outrebounded the Wolf Pack 56-42, leading to a number of easy shots in the lane that accounted for their 56.1 percent shooting.

Another key was UNC's defense. Nevada-Reno came to Chapel Hill averaging a whopping 91.6 points per game. They were 11-1 in games in which they had scored 90 points or more and had drilled 40.8 percent of their three-pointers. The Tar Heels held them to a frigid 37.5 percent from the floor and only 8-29 (27.6) from outside the arc.

The Wolf Pack's star, Darryl Owens, an NBA prospect, hit UNC for 28 points, but made only 10 of 28 attempts, including two of nine treys. Center Gabriel Parizzia was coming off a 43-point, 14-rebound night in only 25 minutes of play against Northern Arizona. The Tar Heels "held" him to 18 points (on 6for-14 shooting) and eight rebounds.

Bucknall argued that North Carolina didn't need this type of game, and the Tar Heels proved his reasoning in the first few minutes.

"I like the pressure of the ACC," he said. "I think once you get to one level of competition, you want to stay there. In these games, you tend to do a lot of stuff you don't usually do."

If he wasn't worried coming in, Smith might have broken a sweat when the Wolf Pack's Matt Williams hit a follow shot just over three minutes into the game to open up a 12-3 lead.

"I didn't think it would be like that; I was disappointed," said Smith. "I guess they thought this was the game where they all get to pad their averages."

He couldn't stem the tide, however. as Fox added seven more points down the stretch, giving the Tar Heels a 60-39 halftime lead. At the break, Fox had 15 points, while Madden chipped in 10. Reid and Scott Williams had nine apiece.

The Wolf Pack again came out of the locker room and challenged the Tar Heels. Kevin Williams hit a jumper 2:45 into the second half that brought the Wolf Pack within 16, but it was as close as they would come.

and for one of his patented baseline turnarounds. After an offensive

Fox fed Madden for both a layup rebound, Fox again found Madden open, and the junior hit the layup and drew a foul. His free throw at the 16:12 mark made the score 69-47, and UNC never looked back.

The teams traded baskets until Bucknall nailed a three-pointer from the top of the key to give North Carolina its biggest lead of the game at 83-54.

Although there are three fencing categories - foil, epee and sabre women collegiately only fence foil. Epee and foil are "electric." That is, the fencer is connected to a body cord so that he can know if he is hit on target or not.

The target area for foil is the torso. A player is allowed to hit the opponent with the tip of the sword only and wins by hitting the opponent five times.

According to Gates, the captains play an important role on the fencing team. "We help the players with any problem if they don't want to go to the coach," she said. "We also help with practices and run things when coach is away."

Gates said that assistant coach Ron might learn something.

Gates said that fencing is an interesting but often overlooked sport. "I'd like people to come to our matches and get to know the sport," she said. "Some people think that when you get hit you're in pain or you bleed or something. In fact, a student once asked me if the chain mail was heavy. No one knows much about this sport."

It's true that few people can hold their own in a conversation about fencing but perhaps a little publicity is all the team needs.

"I wasn't that worried," said Madden. "We were getting the ball inside; we were just missing easy shots.'

Reid said, "I hope we got the kinks out tonight because we don't want any more games this sloppy. Coach Smith let us play for awhile, then he got us to do the things that will make us a championship team."

Those things began after Williams slammed home an alley-oop that made the margin 17-11, and the Tar Heels began to slam the door on Nevada-Reno.

King Rice started a 25-4 UNC run with a driving layup and a foul line jumper. He then fed Madden for an alley-oop tip-in that tied the score at 17 with 13:48 to play. Amidst a balanced attack, Reid contributed six points as the Tar Heels built the lead to 36-21 at the 8:44 mark.

When the Wolf Pack's Kevin Franklin sneaked behind the Tar Heel defense for a layup and hit two free throws, UNC's lead was only nine. However, Fox's wake-up call must have been for 6:47, as he exploded for six quick points. After a follow shot and a wide-open dunk, Fox drove the lane on the break for an electrifying slam that drew a timeout from Nevada-Reno's Stevens with
