Spring Training is here, so even Orioles can be proud

Spring training is here once again. No, this isn't one of those stories about how I went to spring training in Florida and saw my lifelong hero in action or anything like that. I've only been to Florida once, and that was to go to Disney World.

Rather, this is the time of year for all Baltimore Orioles fans to join together and have hope; our beloved Birds are breaking out of their fiveyear slump in 1989. Back when we were all teenagers in 1983, still using Clearasil and not shaving every day, manager Joe Altobelli led Baltimore over the Philadelphia Phillies in the World Series. But Jim Palmer retired with injuries the next year, certain key people passed their peak, and management made some stupid decisions. The result was a franchise in shambles. In 1986, the Orioles' streak of 18 winning seasons was snapped, and frankly, Baltimore has just plain sucked since then. It was cool to be an Orioles' fan when they were winning. You didn't have to take a back seat to anyone in baseball arguments, except maybe Yankee fans. They could always boast about their many talented players, but let's not forget about how General George Steinbrenner virtually buys good players with multi-million dollar contracts.

Look what a few years can do. I can no longer proudly wear in public my Orioles T-shirt or my cap with the cartoon Oriole logo. (They're changing that, by the way, to a more ornithologically-correct Oriole.) People tease me. It's no fun cheering for a losing team. I can now relate to customary position at the bottom of all Green Bay Packer fans.

Two analogies come to mind: (1) When people know you're a Baltimore fan, it's like sitting at the dinner table with your friends and having ketchup on the corner of your mouth. Everybody's laughing at you, but they won't tell you what's so funny if you ask.

days is like enjoying the sweet sounds of Debbie Gibson and Tiffany. You can enjoy it in private just fine, but don't let anybody outside your immediate family know your secret.

Some people in this world have actually been sympathetic. As soon as they find out what team I like, they say, "Oh, I'm sorry," almost as if a close relative died. Most people aren't half as nice, though. There is something about a loud-mouthed baseball fan that makes people want to kick him when he's down. Followers of decent teams like to toss in little cutting remarks.

"Are the Orioles going to be any better this year?" they ask with a smirk. Hell, they went 54-107 in 1988. How can you get any worse? When I tell doubters that Joe Orsulak and Dave Schmidt will lead Baltimore out of the cellar, these guys laugh at me because they think I've made the names up.

"Dave Schmidt? Don't you mean Mike Schmidt? But he's the third baseman for the Phillies."

"No. I'm talking about Dave Schmidt, the pitcher. He's got the Orioles' best record over the last two seasons."

"Really? How many games did he win? Five? Ha ha ha ha'

You get the idea. But get ready, Bird fans. This is the year that Baltimore will leave the basement and return the Cleveland Indians to their the American League East. The youth movement by management will finally show dividends this year.

Yeah, yeah, you're saying. The Orioles have all-star shortstop Cal Ripken, but they traded Eddie Murray to the Dodgers, and he was half Not so. This is a common argument

(2) Rooting for the Orioles nowa- of Oriole bashers, but there is much more than that.

Bradley could make a significant impact, as could former Atlanta Brave slugger Bob Horner. Horner is being given a tryout in training camp. If he makes the roster, he could add some much-needed power to the Ripken's brother Bill plays second base. A fine fielder who hit over .300 his rookie year, he's got plenty of potential. But how much can you count on a guy who barely hit .200 last year and whose biggest claim to fame is having an obscenity on his baseball card?

Overall, there are about zero positions that are secure. Even Cal might be moved over to third. This isn't a team media guide, so we won't even try to go into detail about who's playing where. Just know that if we did, my cohorts would accuse me of making up names again. After all, the leading hitter was a guy named Joe Orsulak. And their best defensive player might be the legendary Brady Anderson.

The facts are sad but true. The Orioles finished 23 1/2 games behind Cleveland last year — but Cleveland was in sixth place. They won no more than four games against any division opponent. They won a season series from only one team, the mighty Seattle Mariners.

The Orioles have a long way to go before they become the perenially dominating force they were under Earl Weaver. But then again, you never know. The Dodgers were supposed to finish fifth last year, but we know what they did to the hardhitting Oakland A's in the World Series. So why don't we just forget all the talk about Baltimore improving a little bit each year? Let's go for the whole ball of wax this year. We can have the World Series trophy back at Memorial Stadium where it for sports info team You enjoy UNC sports and are looking for some good working experience, right?

Try out

Well, now you can tackle both interests in one shot.

The UNC sports information office is looking for student assistants for the 1989-90 school year and any student can apply.

No specific experience is necessary for the available positions, though knowledge of sports, journalism and/or statistics will be helpful.

All interested students should turn in an application to Lee Snyder, sports information secretary, by April 7.

Any and all questions should be directed to the SI office at 962-2123.

Track places 8th in NCAA meet

The North Carolina women's indoor track team capped an outstanding season by finishing in eighth place at the NCAA indoor track and field championships. By tying Missouri and Kentucky, the Tar Heels claimed the highest finish ever for a Carolina women's team.

"We were 19th last year and were hoping for a top 15 finish," said head coach Dennis Craddock. "After some things started to go right, I told the girls we could make the top 10. Having our success be unexpected makes it all that much better."

Kim Austin led a parade of ten All-Americas for UNC by finishing second in the triple jump. No UNC female has ever finished that high in an NCAA event. The junior from Wilson, N.C., also earned All-America honors by finishing second in the long jump.

round," Craddock said. "Kim's performance was one of many great efforts by our athletes. We brought ten women and all scored points.'

The other North Carolina All-Americas all set school records in their events. Sharon Couch was fourth in the 55-meter hurdles, with a time of 7.75 seconds. The 3200meter relay team of Michelle Faherty, Kari Krehnbrink, Monica Witterholt and Mia Pollard finished fifth. The 1600-meter relay team of Kendra Mackey, Sonya Thomas, Rebecca Russell and Shelby Moorman took

"It's an honor just to make Nationals," said Craddock, "but their performance shows they peaked at the right time and were mentally prepared."

Craddock is also looking forward to the future as Witterholt is the only senior among his All-Americas.
