Heisman winner opts for NFL

From Associated Press reports — OKLAHOMA CITY — Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders will turn pro, testing the NFL's restrictions against drafting underclassmen, Oklahoma State athletic director Myron Roderick said Thursday.

"He is going to go pro," said Roderick, who added that the school had notified the NCAA and was in the process of declaring him ineligible to play next season.

Earlier, a pro football source told The Associated Press that Sanders will be represented by David Ware, an Atlanta-based agent, to negotiate his contract. However, it wasn't clear whether he had formally signed with Ware.

Neither Sanders nor his parents were available for comment. Ware was also unavailable.

Sanders, a running back, will announce his decision at a news conference in Denver on Saturday.

Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones also plans to have a short news conference after his team's scrimmage Saturday in Stillwater.

In January, the NCAA placed

Oklahoma State on four years probation, barring the Cowboys from bowl games for the next three years and live television for the next two.

Sanders is a true junior. He has been at Oklahoma State for just three years and would be the first such underclassman to attempt to enter the NFL through either the regular or supplemental draft.

If he entered the regular draft, he might be picked as high as third. The Detroit Lions, who pick in that spot, had indicated they might choose him.

WHEELCHAIR BOUND STUDENT looking for care attendants. No previous experience needed. Willing to train. Flexible hours. If you are pursuing a career in nursing, PT, OT or any other allied health profession, or just need extra cash, this would be great hands on experience working with a physically disabled person. Positions available now and first or second summer sessions. If interested please call Frank for more information, 929-9337.
