Area churches will offer late hours during exams

By LYNN GOSWICK

'Is'Students who need a quiet place to study for this semester's final exams do not have to look any further than their local churches.

During the exam period, several 'area churches will remain open extra hours to accommodate the serious student who is looking for an alterhative to campus libraries.

Some churches will stay open 24 hours a day, while others will be open for only a few hours.

Sister Mary Walsh of the Newman Catholic Student Center said beginning this Sunday after the 11 a.m. Mass, the center will be open 24 hours a day every day until exams end.

The Newman Center has provided UNC students with study facilities since it opened, and each study period has gone well, Sister Walsh said. "Everybody just respects everybody."

The center, which is located at 218 Pittsboro St. across from the Carolina Inn, does not have as much room as some other facilities, she said, but the facilities at the Newman Center are put to good use. "Whatever room we have, we use."

The Chapel of the Cross will open its library, Sunday School classrooms and student commons after 5 p.m. during exam time, said Maria Basile, a volunteer at the church.

The Chapel, which is located at 304 E. Franklin St. next to Morehead Planetarium, will be open each day from 7 a.m. until 10 p.m., said David Stanford, associate campus minister. Students staying after 10 p.m. sign a late-night study covenant with the church, he said.

The study covenant is an agreement made between students and the church that allows students to study all night in the Chapel if students clean up and lock the door before they leave, he said.

"It's a part of our open-door policy to the community ... especially students," Stanford said.

University Baptist Church will also be open to students during exam time, said Nancy Lee, assistant minister.

Students may study or meditate in any of the rooms of the church or even the sanctuary, Lee said. The church, which is located at 100 S. Columbia St., is open during the day from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. and on Wednesday nights after the church supper until around 10 p.m., she said.

"The church has always had a pretty strong relationship with students," Lee said.

University United Methodist Church, 150 E. Franklin St., will be open to students April 30, May 1 and May 2 from 10 p.m. until 2 a.m., said Charlie Currin, a church spokesman. Snacks and drinks will be provided.

The Presbyterian Student Center, which is located at 110 Henderson St., will open its library and classrooms for students from 9 a.m. until midnight, said Rebecca Reyes, Presbyterian campus minister. The kitchen will be open to students who want UNC alumnus Roger Mudd will be the featured speaker at the 1989 commencement ceremony at 10:30 a.m. May 14 in Kenan Stadium.

"I think this is a moment we've been anticipating for four years," said senior class President Steve Tepper. "However, there will also be a lot of feelings we won't have anticipated. It will a potpourri of emotions happiness, sadness and reservations."

Joe McCall, senior class commencement committee co-chairman, said class officers wanted to keep some of the traditions that have been here for many years, such as holding graduation in Kenan Stadium.

"Last year due to construction, the configuration was different. Students were sitting on the field and it created many problems. I think it detracted from the atmosphere."

The degree candidates will be seated in the stands and the platform party of administrators, faculty and students will remain on the field. Most of the construction will be completed before the commencement ceremony, except for a small area near the entrance, McCall said. About 3500 students are expected to walk across the platform. This year a graduation moment has been added when Chancellor Paul Hardin will announce to the students to turn their tassles. The moment will be included to signify to seniors the moment when they are officially removed from the University, McCall said.

In celebration of the 200th year of the University, the graduates will also have a bicentennial tassle attached to their caps, he said.

The ceremony is expected to last between two and two and a half hours.

Tepper and senior class Vice President David Adams will also speak at graduation. In addition, three honorary degrees will be awarded.

In the case of rain, the ceremony will be held in the Smith Center. This will be determined the night before commencement. The senior class commencement committee and the Chancellor's commencement committee have been working since the day after last year's ceremony for commencement 1989. "It is a big event. It is an accumulation of four years of hard work," McCall said. "Hopefully, everyone will come away satisfied and with fond memories.'

"We hope seniors can spend an hour and a half of reflection of their years at Carolina," Tepper said. Mudd of the MacNeil/Lehrer show said commencement is a passage in a person's life. "It is probably for most graduates the last time they will all be together."

Mudd, who completed his graduate work at UNC, said he looked forward to speaking at commencement. "I am flattered to be asked to return to UNC."

Mudd was chosen because of his ties to the University, said McCall. He also received the Distinguished Alumnus Award University Day. Following commencement exercises, Chancellor Hardin will host a reception in Polk Place near South

Commencement is also the same weekend as alumni weekend class reunions. Some activities planned for alumni include the Friday Frolic allclass social and supper, alumni jog and a semi-formal dance in Granville
