Device covers seats of toilets

From Associated Press reports
DELRAY BEACH, Fla. — A new-fangled push-button device for guarding against germs on toilet seats has Alan Brill flushed with excitement.
 Brill, a former advertising agent, is distributing the Swiss-made devices that include a special toilet seat attached to a spool of plastic wrap, which rolls out in place of conventional paper seat covers.
 "People are paranoid about what you can contract from a toilet seat," said Brill, whose company has installed hundreds of the devices in Florida and Georgia. "If you have a toilet seat covered with paper, the paper could absorb moisture that could go right to your skin."
 Brill's customers include hotels, country clubs and restaurants. The device sells for $250 to $280 and can be leased for $15 to $19 a month. A case of 12 rolls of replacement plastic costs $48.95, with each spool providing 90 sittings worth.
 Brill said he picked up an interest in bathroom hygiene from his father, who considered toilet seats unsanitary. Brill first saw the Hygolet seat demonstrated in 1985.
 "I thought it was the greatest thing since electricity."
