it could have just as easily been 14-10," Ford admitted.

But when Clemson's Levon Kirkland intercepted a Burnett pass on the second play of the second half, the game got out of hand. Clemson took over on the UNC 18 and scored in four plays to run the score up to 21-3.

"I guess the big play of the game had to be that interception early in the third quarter," Ford said.

That turnover took a lot out of the Tar Heels. The fact that UNC's defense had spent almost 19 minutes of the first half on the field finally caught up with the Tar Heels. The Clemson offensive line started blowing the UNC defense off the line. Three rushing touchdowns by the Tigers in the second half (two by Henderson and one by Reggie Lawrence) accounted for the final score.

The Tar Heels almost lost something more important than the game when senior co-captain Torin Dorn fell to the turf with four seconds left in the first quarter. Dorn lay motionless for more than five minutes after a 15-yard run by Wesley McFadden. Tiger wide receiver Chip Davis blocked Dorn as he twisted towards McFadden.

Trainers worked on Dorn for more than five minutes before he left the field on a backboard with his helmet taped to the board and was rushed by ambulance to N.C. Memorial Hospital.

News that Dorn felt numbness in his hands and was undergoing x-ray examination at the hospital changed the intensity of the game. But Dorn returned to the field without pads in the third quarter and apparently sustained no serious injury.

"I was sort of woozy, and the only thing I don't remember was the hit," said a disappointed Dorn after the game. "I can play, and I'll be ready next week. I knew I was OK when I was laying on the ground. But they really scared me when they put me on the stretcher. It just feels like a crick in my neck now."

four yards before punching into the end zone from three yards out.

Ford said that Henderson deserved to be a full-time starter but added that he liked using a combination of tailbacks. "We've been very blessed to have two tailbacks," Ford said. "You don't want Terry (Allen) sitting over there and you don't want Joe (Henderson) sitting over there too long. It's really a very fine combination to have the hard-nosed type runner which Terry is and Joe, who is a very shifty runner."

Henderson agreed with Ford's assessment, saying, "I try to do the best I can to not get tackled, and I do whatever that takes. I think that takes a little bit of dancing sometimes."

After waltzing through the UNC defense for three quarters and scoring his third touchdown, Henderson sat down and turned over the reins to junior Reggie Lawrence, who scored the Tigers' final touchdown.

By contrast, the North Carolina rushing attack netted minus six yards. Even after negating UNC quarterback Todd Burnett's six sacks for minus 47 yards, the Tar Heels still averaged just two and a half yards per carry.

On the other hand, Clemson averaged just under five yards per carry, which was plenty for the Tigers. "That's Clemson football," Henderson said. "Just running the ball and that's all they ask is four yards."
