Accidents, homicide claim 3 students

By STEPHANIE JOHNSTON
Assistant University Editor

Two UNC students were killed in car accidents this summer, and a third student was slain as she left a party in High Point.

Katherine Noell Johnson, a rising junior from High Point, was leaving a party July 10 at the hotel where she worked part time when she was killed.

Lesley Eugene Warren, a 22-year-old white male, has been arrested in connection with Johnson's death and charged with first-degree murder. Detective Mark McNeill of the High Point Police Department said.

Authorities declined to give a motive in the killing, but Warren had just met Johnson that day, McNeill said. Warren is also a suspect in other deaths in North Carolina and elsewhere.

Johnson, an accounting major, was attending both sessions of summer school at the University.

"She loved Chapel Hill," said Ann

Johnson, her mother. "She loved being down there. She had made some very good friends."

Neal Butler Sullivan, a rising senior from Kitty Hawk, died Aug. 8 from injuries sustained in a car accident six days earlier. Sullivan, a criminology major, had been a starter on the varsity golf team for the past three years.

"Neal was a great loss for our golf program, the athletic family and the University," said varsity golf coach Devon Brouse. "He was well-liked and very popular among his teammates. He'll be greatly missed."

Sullivan was a two-time honorable-mention All-America golf player.

Shawn W. Caldwell, an incoming freshman from Hickory, died July 19 following a car accident.

According to The Hickory Daily Record, Caldwell's prognosis was good when he first arrived at the hospital. After further examination, doctors discovered that one of his arteries had ruptured. Caldwell died soon after.

Man dies in unexplained fall from Granville stairwell

From staff reports

A man found last week at the bottom of a Granville West stairwell had no local address or ties to the University, Captain Ralph Pendergraph, Chapel Hill police department, said.

Around 9 p.m. last Wednesday, a Granville security attendant found David Schmidt, whose last known address was in San Diego, Calif., lying at the bottom of an outside stairwell.

Schmidt died Thursday morning at N.C. Memorial Hospital from injuries sustained in the fall.

Authorities do not know why Schmidt was on Granville property.

Because Schmidt did not survive the fall, the investigation is closed, Pendergraph said.

Graduates

have educated legislators about the effects of budget cuts on teaching assistants.

"The Chapel Hill campus administration has been very supportive and gone to enormous lengths to make sure no one is laid off," Hahamovitch said. "The (UNC-system) General Administration - who knows what they're doing? None of the (state) representatives had been made aware that TA positions would be cut."

Graduate students are trying to work with administrators to educate legislators, Bradshaw said. "It's their (the UNC-system's) job to educate legislators."

In an effort to demonstrate the effects of budget cuts on the University, GSU and student government executive branch are designating Sept. 11 as "Save UNC Day." A rally is planned for 12:30 p.m. on South Lawn, and a forum will be held 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. in Great Hall.

Hahamovitch said that every state legislator had been invited to the forum and that representatives from the faculty, staff, graduate students and undergraduate students would attend. "We are encouraging students to request of their professors that they be let out of class (for the events)," she said. "We are encouraging faculty to be lenient."

Department chairmen said they have had to cancel some sections because of budget cuts, but they have tried to honor all contracts with graduate students.

"We have not had to rescind any contracts," said Colin Palmer, history-department chairman. "However, there were some individuals who should have been offered contracts who were not. The budget cuts have exacerbated a TA budget that was already lean."

"We are going to have to cancel some sections," said Robert Gallman, economics-department chairman. "Graduate students, we've managed to protect."

Graduate students said that budget cuts would make recruitment for the graduate school difficult.

"If I were a senior applying to graduate schools, I'd never come here," said Cindy Stark, a philosophy graduate student.

"(The graduate school's reputation) will deteriorate unless pay is increased to be comparable with other schools," Bradshaw said. "We'll continue to lose the best applications for graduate school. While others are increasing, we are staying level or decreasing."

GSU is asking for a 6 percent salary increase for TAs who now make less than $4,000 a semester. "Since there is a budget crisis, we recognize we won't get it now," Hahamovitch said.

Dear Important Customers:

Lately it seems that every new kid on the block is making frozen yogurt part of the menu. Well, frozen yogurt isn't part of our menu; frozen yogurt is our menu. And that lets us specialize on what is most important to you. So, if you want delicious frozen yogurt, we recommend that you come to downtown Chapel Hill's only exclusive frozen yogurt shoppe. Not only are we unique with the best-tasting frozen yogurt and the best value per ounce, but we also offer the greatest variety in frozen yogurt: fat-free, sugar-free, low-fat, rich and exotic, and tangy fruit flavors. All of our yogurt is 97%-100% fat-free and only 10-26 calories per ounce.

And that doesn't even mention Trivia Tuesday, a warm friendly atmosphere, and fresh, new flavors every day.

You have seen many yogurt-selling restaurants and chains come and go. Only The Yogurt Pump has been serving delicious frozen yogurt since 1983, and we look forward to serving you for the many years to come.
