create something or put the ball on the floor, and fortunately it worked for us tonight."

Littles said the plan Saturday night was to get Reid the ball and let him try to make things happen for the offense.

"We decided if Bol started we would go to J.R. first," he said. "We ran the plays to him, and Bol never came out, so J.R. pulled up for the little jumpers. Fortunately, they were falling for him tonight."

Reid hopes his performance Saturday night indicates his future as a Hornet.

"I hope I'm becoming a bigger part of the offense," Reid said. "I finally got some shots, and I felt comfortable. My teammates looked for me, and it felt good. My jumper was falling, and I got some great passes and screens from my teammates. This is a good win for us, and hopefully it will start us off on the right foot this season."

Charlotte is now 2-0 in the preseason with its latest win over Philadelphia. Although the Hornets defeated Dallas 107-83, Reid said beating the 76ers was even more important for Charlotte.

"(Friday night against Dallas) wasn't that big a win because they played so many players, but tonight (the 76ers) went with their big guns," Reid said. "(Charles) Barkley played a lot of minutes. Their starting five played a lot of minutes. We had to beat them to win."

"Everybody played well for us, and we had a lot of different combinations out there. I think we played really well together. If we keep that enthusiasm and play as hard as we can play, we're going to have a really good team."

Volleyball sweeps by American for 11th win

Sunday's non-conference volleyball match at Carmichael Auditorium was far from an all-American performance, as North Carolina swept by American University in three games, 15-6, 15-9, 15-5.

American head coach Barry Goldberg, in his second season with the Lady Eagles, was realistic about his team's chances coming into the match. "This is one of the top teams we play all year," Goldberg said. "We were fairly prepared for the match, but we just didn't have the manpower to compete." The loss dropped American to 12-6 for the season.

North Carolina, now 11-8 overall, came out slowly in the first game, falling behind 3-1. But UNC began to put it together when senior captain Liz Berg unleashed one of her many weapons, the jump serve. With UNC leading 7-5, Berg took over the serving duties and the Tar Heels tallied six consecutive points to take a commanding 13-5 advantage. Berg powered two aces in the run, and moments later she clinched the first game with one of her seven kills on the day.

Berg views aces via the jump serve as important momentum builders. "Anytime you get an ace, it's something that definitely gets the team going," Berg said.

First-year Tar Heel head coach Joe Sagula saw Berg's strong serving as a wake-up call for his Tar Heels. "We weren't really serving that well in the first game," Sagula said. "Also, Melissa (Mroczek) was hitting the ball well... It created a good balance."

Mroczek was indeed hitting well. The Bethesda, Md., junior was credited with a team-high 12 kills on the day. Mroczek controlled play in the second game, as UNC again rallied from an early 3-1 deficit to win 15-9. Berg was again the serving star, leading a four-point run that broke open a close game.

North Carolina continued to get stronger as the match progressed, jumping to a 5-0 lead in the final game. AU finally broke through with one point, but the Tar Heels followed with a six-point barrage to take an 11-1 lead.

In addition to her seven kills, Berg tallied a team-high 12 digs and four aces. Berg entered the week of play third in the ACC in aces, averaging .55 aces per game. Freshman Cindy Murray was impressive with 10 kills, and sophomore Carolyn Flanders also performed well while collecting 10 digs.

Sagula was satisfied with his team's effort but saw plenty of room for improvement.

"I think we could have played a little bit better," he said.

Specifically, Sagula saw a need for better team passing, but he didn't think UNC's early sloppy play resulted from the Tar Heels' five-game setback at N.C. State last Tuesday. "We tried to put it (the State loss) in the back of our minds," he said.

THERE ARE TWO SIDES TO BECOMING A NURSE IN THE ARMY.

And they're both represented by the insignia you wear as a member of the Army Nurse Corps. The caduceus on the left means you're part of a health care system in which educational and career advancement are the rule, not the exception. The gold bar

Place letters in red box outside DTH office at Suite 104 Student Union
Or send to CB# 5210 Union box 49

This is how it works:
Write a letter to mom or dad or both describing for them just how badly you need a decent meal and basically beg them to come visit you during UNC's Parents Weekend October 26-28. Get the letter to our office by Friday October 19 at 5 p.m. The writer of the most compelling letter home as judged by our sympathetic and starving staff wins dinner for four at Pyewacket on Saturday night, October 27. We'll mail all the best letters home for you, and the winner's will be Federal Expressed home, making an impression no parent could ignore -- even if you haven't called in weeks. Five runners up will receive Daily Tar Heel T-shirts. As if that weren't enough, the winning letter will be reprinted in Omnibus Oct. 25.

Rules? Did you say rules?

Just a few basics:
Letters should be typed or printed (none of that cursive stuff) on 8 1/2" x 11" plain or ruled paper. Mom and dad may be able to read your writing, but we can't. They should not exceed one page. They should include your parents' home street address, city, state and zip -- no P.O. boxes. The writer's full name, local address and local phone must also be included on a separate sheet or on the letter. Finally, just get it here by 5 p.m. next Friday. Winners will be notified on Oct 22. If you have any questions, please call 962-1163.
