Softball sweeps Camels; Men's tennis aces Utah

Staff reports
BUES CREEK — The North Carolina softball team opened its season Wednesday by stomping on the Campbell Camels in both games of a doubleheader. UNC won the first game, 3-0, behind the pitching of Tracy Brower. The Tar Heels won game two, 7-1, on the big bat of Beverly Smith.
 In the opener, Brower surrendered only two hits in her five innings of work, while striking out 12. The senior from Newton, Pa., recorded her first win of the year with help from freshman Paige Lauby. The El Toro, Calif., native hurled the final two frames, fanning six.
 The Tar Heels recorded only six hits but made the most of them, scoring single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth. Junior outfielder Theresa Buscemi was the hitting hero, cracking two doubles and knocking in two runs.
 In game two, UNC sophomore Yvette Davis set out to top Brower's performance. She allowed only one hit in five innings, striking out five. Lauby recorded her second save of the season by pitching the final two frames.
 Smith, a freshman outfielder, went 3 for 4 at the plate, driving in three runs. Junior third baseman Michelle Rupp and Bright added two hits each.
 UNC took control early, tallying three times in the first, twice in the second and once in the third. Campbell scored once in the third, but UNC added an insurance run in the fifth.

Men's tennis smashes Utah
 LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The 15th-ranked North Carolina men's tennis team began play Wednesday in the 1991 USTA/ITCA National Indoor Team Championship. The Tar Heels cruised past Utah, the only unranked squad in the 20-team field. With the 6-0 victory, UNC improves to 3-1, while the Utes fall to 4-4.
 At first singles, UNC's Roland Thornqvist beat Chris Entzel, 6-3, 6-4. Thornqvist is a transfer from Elon College where he won the NAIA championship last season.
 The Tar Heels' Woody Webb, ranked 28th in the country, took Ed Peregrino, 6-4, 7-5, at second singles. At third singles, UNC's Bryan Jones smoked Jeff Weichers, 6-0, 6-2.
 Andre Janasik won fourth singles for the Tar Heels, beating Jason Mutterspaw, 6-2, 6-4. By an identical score, UNC's Thomas Tannert took Chris Reilly at fifth singles. At sixth singles, UNC's Chris Mumford suffered the squad's only losing set but still knocked off Graeme Cox, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.
 Because the Tar Heels led 6-0, the doubles matches were not played.
 North Carolina will be challenged in the next round when they face No. 2 UCLA.

New Bush energy plan meets opposition from environmentalists

The Associated Press
 WASHINGTON — President Bush unveiled his long-awaited national energy plan Wednesday, saying it "strikes a sound and reasonable balance" without burdening the economy, but critics quickly assailed it for focusing on production over energy conservation.
 One member of Congress called the blueprint "a back to the '50s" strategy to promote oil drilling, while another said it "falls far short" of what is needed to cut America's dependence on foreign oil.
 Environmentalists also attacked the Bush plan as shortsighted because it ignores calls for development of more fuel-efficient cars, while pushing oil production in pristine areas.

 The president said he was aware he had his critics, but added "none of them will propose a plan that is more comprehensive or in my view more carefully thought out."
 Bush's package calls for:
 ■ Increasing domestic oil production, including drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in northern Alaska.
 ■ Easing regulatory barriers for construction of nuclear power plants and the disposal of atomic wastes to "revitalize" the nuclear option as an energy source.
 ■ Streamlining regulations for building natural gas pipelines as well as other actions to make natural gas a more competitive energy source.

 ■ Overhauling the regulation of the electric utility industry to increase competition and promote the use of renewable energy sources such as solar and wind power.
 Although rejecting proposals that would require sharply higher fuel economy for automobiles, the strategy includes measures to increase the use of alternative motor fuels such as ethanol, and contains several modest proposals to encourage the use of mass transit and increase the energy efficiency of homes.
 The administration rejected suggestions for higher energy taxes, such as a gasoline tax, that many energy experts argue is needed to gain significant reductions in energy use.

 Bush called the plan "a strategy for an energy future that is secure, efficient and environmentally sound" but warned that Americans can expect, nevertheless, to rely heavily on foreign oil for many years to come.
 "We are a long way from total energy independence," the president declared in announcing the energy package.
 "Over the next two decades," Bush continued, "this strategy will make us more energy efficient without new energy taxes, and it will mean savings for consumers in energy costs and it will improve our energy security and reduce our vulnerability in the years ahead."
 Energy Secretary James Watkins said

the proposals, most of which will require legislation, were designed to reduce oil consumption by 3.4 million barrels a day and increase domestic oil production by 3.8 million barrels a day over the next 20 years.
 If the plan were adopted, however, the Energy Department anticipates imports still will account for 40 to 45 percent of the oil used in the United States by the year 2010, about the same as current levels.

Gift
 Pete Holthausen, senior class president, said he was thrilled with the results of the drive. He said its success was because of Herman and Dabal's work, the volunteers and the entire senior class.
 "In the end, credit must go to the seniors because if they did not feel that it (the endowment) was a worthy cause they wouldn't have given," Holthausen said.
 University librarian James Govan called the gift a "tremendous boost for the library."
 The National Endowment for the Humanities will add 25 cents to every dollar contributed as part of a matching grant. Govan said this would increase the endowment by nearly $88,000.

 Chris Brown, senior class vice president, said the seniors he had spoken to about the record-breaking donations were surprised. "Even the people who donated were shocked. A lot of seniors were psyched up about the gift and that fueled the drive."
 James Parrish, director of Senior

Programs, said the 1991 gift was the best idea he had heard of since the class gift committee began working with the development office in 1984. The endowment would be established as soon as the first $20,000 was collected, he said.
 Parrish said he expected 70-80 percent of the 1991 seniors would complete the first pledged payment and then there would be a 10 percent drop at each succeeding payment.

 also failed to identify them.
 "His photographs and fingerprints have also been sent to the highway department (in Graham)," Brinkhous said.
 The body will be cremated if a positive identification is not made soon, he said. In most cases, the medical examiner's office keeps an unidentified body for 10 days before cremation, Brinkhous added.
 "The body will be held until everything has been exhausted," he said.
 Approximately two to eight corpses remain unidentified in North Carolina each year, he said.

 Bates said she had contacted several people about her son's disappearance, but had not learned anything new.
 She left a photograph of her son and a list of his name and age, the date he disappeared and the family's phone number at the InterFaith Council shelter in Chapel Hill, she said.
 "We have been driving around asking people about him, and they (IFC) offered to put his picture up," she said.
 "We're asking that if anyone sees him that they call home."

 Mass Communication. "Given these constraints on coverage, an assignment in Iraq does not require as much journalistic expertise."
 "I am not inclined to risk life or limb to cover the war story," Ross said. "I wonder what the appeal of the assignment is in terms of journalism."
 Jan Elliot, a lecturer in the journalism school and mother of two children, agreed with Ross. "Twenty years ago, I might have given into my sense of adventure. Now I have children and responsibilities."
 Julie Gammill, a senior journalism major at UNC, said she had higher priorities than her career.
 "My well-being comes first," Gammill said.
 Sandy Wall, editor of the UNC Journalist, said: "The little kid in you says, 'Let's go explore.' It's really easy not to take the danger seriously."
 "However, I probably would have gotten scared and turned tail and run before I got as far as Simon did," Wall said.
 Bill Cloud, an associate professor in the journalism school, recognized the lure of the war assignment. "It's where the action is. A lot of reporters want to get in on the big news of the day."
 Simon is a 24-year CBS veteran who has covered conflicts around the globe. His wife Françoise, along with over 3,000 journalists, have sent letters and petitions to Hussein asking for information and pleading for the crew's safe return.
