Field hockey thumps Duke, 3-0

By David J. Kupstas

Scoring a goal in field hockey does not have to be a pretty thing. UNC forward Amy Cox can attest to that. She will be the first to tell you that her game-winning goal in the first half of the Tar Heels' 3-0 win over Duke Wednesday night at Navy Field took a lot more luck than it did skill.

"I saw (Duke goalkeeper Ritika Bowry) come out, if you can call that skill," the junior from Houston said. "I just pushed the ball because I saw her come up, and it went in. I didn't even expect to score - I thought I'd try it and it worked."

Cox's score and second-half goals by Stephanie Walsh and Mary Hartzell pushed UNC to a win in its home opener, improving the Tar Heels to 3-

2. The loss dropped Duke to 3-1.

Although Duke is also a member of the ACC, Wednesday night's game does not count in the conference standings. The two teams will meet again Oct. 30 in an ACC contest.

UNC head coach Karen Shelton was pleased that her team rebounded from Sunday's 3-0 loss at No. 4 Penn State, although the Tar Heels still have not put together a solid 70 minutes of play.

'I told the girls, 'I think we have periods of beautiful play and also periods of mediocre play," Shelton said.
"All that really is is a little lack of mental discipline. With a young team certainly you expect those kinds of lapses, so hopefully they'll become fewer and farther between as the season

UNC added icing to the cake on a penalty corner with 1:48 left. Cox stopped the hit-in from Kelly Staley, paving the way for Hartzell, who scored off the foot of a Duke player.

The Tar Heels took 10 penalty corners, while Duke had only one.

"They committed to us too close and we took advantage of it," Cox said. "Had they played off of us more, we maybe would have taken more

"We really rely on the corners to get our goals. That's why we're good at forcing corners."

2nd not good enough for golfers Tar Heels use fall tourneys to build experience

By Amy McCaffrey Staff Writer

Last year was the North Carolina men's golf team's finest, as it placed in the top three in eight of its 11 spring tournaments, including runner-up finishes in the ACC and NCAA Tournaments. The 1991 fall season begins this weekend, and UNC is ready to prove they are more than just bridesmaids.

"Overall, I hope we do as well as last year," assistant coach Billy Williford said. "I think we're capable of doing it, But everything has to come together at the end, like last year."

good of a team, for sure, but it might be to our advantage, as far as getting some of our players some experience,' Williford said. The starting five for this weekend's Carpet Capital Classic in Dalton, Ga., features only two golfers who have played consistently in collegiate tournaments. Bill Smith, a junior from Buies Creek, and Pat Moore, a senior from Bismarck, N.D., head the team. Moore was named a second-team All-America last season and will play the No. 1 position. Junior Lance Reid and senior David Wood have both seen limited action thus far.

Reid said there was a difference between playing in tournaments as an individual and playing toward a team score. "I probably put more pressure on myself," Reid said. "You're playing for your school.

The fifth starter will be freshman Brian Brown. The Rocky Mount native was pegged a Junior All-America by the American Junior Golf Association last year and finished third overall in the team's qualifying practices. Brown has played in plenty of high school and junior events, and he is looking forward to his first chance to play college golf.

"I'm not sure what to expect, said. "I'm not really that nervous. But I think it's good to be nervous, to be standing up on the first tee with butterflies in your stomach."

Tom Scherrer, a junior who tied for fourth in last year's NCAA Tournament, will not compete this fall. Scherrer played earlier this month in the British Amateur and the Walker Cup, an invitation-only tournament which pits the topten amateurs from the United States against those from Great Britain and Ireland. He has decided to spend the rest of this semester focused on academics.

"In a way, Tom not playing in the fall will give other guys a chance in the lineup," Smith said.

The four tournaments scheduled over the next two months should get UNC's heels wet. Smith said the team's two biggest goals were winning the ACC and NCAA titles. "I think we all think can get back there again and win it," Smith said, referring to the NCAA.

"We got really close this year, and we hope we can win it.
