Convention

think the American people will see that and throw Bush out of office."

Senior Class President Bob Paty would have to disagree. Paty attended the Republican National Convention Aug. 17-20 in Houston as an alternate delegate from Tennessee.

"I feel that the best of Bush is yet to come," he said.

Paty, who ran for a delegate position in Tennessee's 1st Congressional District last spring, was asked to fill an alternate spot at the last minute. "I immediately packed my bags and went to Knoxville," he said.

Autumn Rierson, a sophomore political science and economics major, decided to attend the convention after working in Washington, D.C., for the summer. "It was an incredible opportunity," she said. "I haven't touched the floor yet."

Sophomore Kevin Hunter worked on the convention floor in Houston. "It seemed a lot different than TV," he said. "I was amazed by how much needed to be done."

Hunter said his most exciting moment at the convention was standing next to state GOP chairman Jack Hawke as he delivered the state vote to nominate George Bush.

Paty, who bought a cowboy hat and cowboy boots while in Texas, said he enjoyed the speeches the most. "I've seen the reruns on TV, and I just don't think it was the same for people watching it at home."

Rierson described the convention as a great pep rally. "Bush needed the boost," she said. "I still think it's going to be a tough race. It's hard to call at this point."

Hunter, who drove virtually nonstop to and from Houston, said he was interested in going to another Republican National Convention. "I think I'll fly, though."

Charlotte group revamps football stadium financing

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE — The group trying to land an NFL franchise for Charlotte will meet with league officials this week and present a revamped financing plan for its proposed stadium.

Mark Richardson of Richardson Sports said the NFL leaders will meet in Charlotte Tuesday. The meeting will be closed to the media.

"We've come up with an alternative financing method that we'll be presenting to the NFL soon and making public soon," Richardson said Friday in a telephone interview.

"The only concern has been the ability to finance a stadium and a team. We think this plan will put all those concerns to rest."

The proposal has been at the center of recent controversy among city council members, who said they would not use public funding to help finance construction of a stadium.

Richardson Group has said it would not seek public money to build the facility, which would seat 70,000 people and would be located in downtown Charlotte.

Observers have noted that the Richardson Group's stadium funding plan might be a stumbling block as it competes with four other cities trying to land a franchise. It also has been a topic of conversation among the competing cities as well as the focus of a league study.

"The NFL earlier this spring began comparing the different markets to one another," Richardson said. "In their analysis, it appears St. Louis and Baltimore had better plans than we did."

"They relayed that fact to us and we set out to see if we could negate the advantage that St. Louis and Baltimore have over us in stadium funding. We think that we have effectively done that."

Charlotte Mayor Richard Vinroot met with Hugh McColl, president and chief executive officer of NationsBank this summer, and talks of funding troubles subsided.

St. Louis has been perceived as the leading city to get an expansion franchise.

Charlotte was an early clear-cut choice for the second pick, but expansion experts have said Baltimore has spread quickly around campus Saturday. Police and resident assistants posted fliers in dorms and campus buildings Saturday in an attempt to warn students not to go out alone and to be on the lookout for Lyles.

Although fliers posted around South Campus reported that Lyles had been seen in the Craig Parking Deck Saturday night, Chapel Hill police said they could not confirm the rumors.

"We cannot confirm his activities since Saturday morning," Riddle said. "We cannot confirm how he got to Chapel Hill or why he came here."

they attend a 20-minute party held at each sorority house. Sorority members perform short skits for the rushees. Rushees make name tags designed to reflect a unique personal characteristic.

Rushees visit all 11 houses during round one. In the next rounds, rushees visit as many houses as they are invited back to — up to eight houses in round two, five houses in round three and three houses in round four. If the rushees are invited back to more houses than the maximum they may visit per round, they choose which houses not to visit.

The final round of rush is Bid Day, which will be held Thursday. On Bid Day, most rushees receive an invitation to join a sorority.
