

"The Expanding South."

The New York Commercial Advertiser in its issue of the 26th inst. presents an extensive and interesting article under the above heading, being the expressions of Richard H. Edmonds, editor of the Baltimore Manufacturer's Journal.

Mr. Edmonds begins his talk by referring to the great advertisement given our country, and especially the South, thro the present war. He says that the benefits are beyond computation as it directs the attention of the world to our wonderful resources.

We cannot enter into an elaborate discussion of this subject, but will try to point out a few of the benefits which must come to the Negro

Throughout the south agriculture is an essential industry and from years of training we have become proficient in the requirements for this particular line of occupation. The cotton industry, says Mr. Edmonds will naturally expand as the requirement increases, and nowhere on earth can the supply come up to the demand as in America. Following the agricultural production of cotton, comes the industrial production of cotton goods. In this line, too, we are showing signs of interest by building for ourselves cotton mills, or by becoming operatives in the mills owned by others. The field of industry as it broadens in the South naturally encircles those who live within its borders, and, though at first there may be some inclination toward discrimination, the evident demand for labor requires the utilization of that in hand before seeking elsewhere for help. Economy goes a long way toward directing the projectors of enterprises who to employ, and after a while they naturally seek for the largest amount of profit at the smallest cost.

The immigrants use the profitable employment throughout all the South. Mr. Edmonds points out the fact that while low priced cotton may be a discouragement to some individual farmers, it becomes of especial advantage to the South in that it gives the South a monopoly which it otherwise would not have. Coupled to this the fact that the South is manufacturing and consuming its own products, we gain through the reduction of profits on the manufactured goods.

Mr. Edmonds turns from cotton to iron and in figures proceeds to show the relation the south holds to the world. Alabama is pointed to as "the ruling spirit" in the market of pig iron and there is little doubt that steel will be the next step in the forward march. Here again our people come in for a share for we find that, from the mine to the machine shop, the Negro is utilized with profit to himself and his employers.

Mr. Edmonds points to this as an evidence of Anglo-Saxon domination in the affairs of our great civilization; the Negro comes in as a part of that civilization and will prosper and come to us on this return of peace.

Mr. Edmonds gives us a most hopeful view of the future, not only for the South but for the Negro.

NEWS ITEMS.

Philadelphia, Aug. 30. The Yacht May arrived from Porto Rico bringing the report of the International Relief Commission.

The yacht reports that out of 16,000 troops on the island, over 1,000 are now sick with various diseases also a large number have typhoid fever. She says that better accommodations for the troops are needed a once to prevent great loss of life.

New York, Aug. 30. Much concern is manifested for the welfare of the Eighth New York, which is reported to be coming home in a most pitiable condition. The train with the troops will probably arrive about 1300. Telegraphic reports of the condition of the men are greatly alarming to friends and relatives. Arrangements are being made for 120 men, ambulances and other conveniences to be on hand and every possible attention will be given the troops.

Pick Ups.

The busy season for Wilmington is beginning to open. The extremity many of our people were put to this summer ought to be an incentive for them to look out for the next.

Despise not the day of small beginnings. A blind man who picks up odds and ends and who buys and sells old bottles, owns his home and is as well off as many of our salaried men.

GOOD WORDS FOR WASHINGTON

Improvement in Moral Tone of the Nation's Capital.
Gen. H. V. Boynton, the veteran Washington correspondent, has been for more than 30 years collecting news and writing letters. Few men know so thoroughly as he the inside history of the capitol, the white house, and the departments. Being asked what he considered the most important deduction from his experience at Washington, he answered:

"The marvelous improvement in the moral atmosphere, and the general tone and honesty of the government. We, the people of the United States, have the most honest government in the world. It is and has been for many years more honest than ever before, and is to-day more honestly and efficiently administered than any private business that I have ever examined. I mean that there is less waste and less defalcation."

"Look at the great postal service, for instance. Where in the world will you find any private agency which does so much and does it so well and at so little cost? And change of parties makes no difference. Thorough honesty is the is pure beyond the stain of a residence, and this is the moral and peaceable city in the United States, if not in the world. It is the only place where those good people from New York and Cincinnati can stay out west to help reform Washington."

PERSECUTED IN AMERICA.

John Wesley suffered for Refusing to Consecrate to a Woman.

Rev. W. J. Scott, D. D., writes of "When John Wesley reached in Georgia, in Ladies' Home Journal, and from the famous publisher's journal tells the story of his persecution in Georgia, which ultimately resulted in his quitting America and returning to England in 1737. During the afternoon before Wesley's departure he was approached by the Governor of Savannah, who informed him that he must not leave the province until he had given bond in $500 sterling, and in addition furnished him to answer Mr. Williamson's charge. Wesley responded: 'I have given you every opportunity to make good your accusation, but he refused to do so, and now, sir, he has examined, with emphasis and firmness, I must insist that as an official, you have treated me and the trustees of the colony very ill. I shall neither give bond nor bail. I know your business and I know your enemies of a purpose to ruin me. I am a shadowy protestant, and I am guarded.'"

Wesley then said the out-look of his country was gloomy and without either justice and contrition.

DANGER OF CATERPILLARS.

Armed with a very effective weapon. The caterpillar, the puss-moth, quite a common pest in this country, has a most effective way of defending himself, and may prove, as we shall presently see, a dangerous even to human beings, says a writer in Chambers' Journal. The well-protected caterpillar is provided with its head and forelegs with a fluid, from which it can protrude a organ capable of squirting out a quantity of very acid fluid to a considerable distance, and when alarmed it habitually makes use of this formidable weapon.

In one of the entomological magazines a correspondent states that he was observing some of these caterpillars in captivity when he happened to disturb one, and it suddenly squirted out a quantity of acid in a jet, which struck one of his eyeballs, though his head at the time was quite two feet away from the insect. He rushed off in great agony to a doctor, who told him that the eye was in a very dangerous condition. His eye was totally blind for hours after the occurrence, and it was some days before he finally recovered. What the effect of this fluid must be upon smaller creatures we leave our readers to imagine!

German Settlement in Indiana. Four towns in two counties in Indiana make up a German settlement where German customs prevail exclusively in the home circles of the people.

St. Germain, Wis. was Ferdinand and St. John, Ill. Dubois county, and St. Meinrad, Ind. Maria Hill, in Spencer county. Ferdinand, the oldest of the towns, was founded by a missionary priest, Father Kendrick, in 1840, and was named in honor of Ferdinand I. of Austria. There are two families of Americans in St. Germain, which is the seat of a Benedictine monastery.

A nervous young lady called a physician for a slight ailment, but one which she magnified in her own imagination, into a serious one. "Run," said the doctor to the servant, giving him a prescription, "to the nearest drug store and bring back the medicine as quickly as you can." "Is there much danger?" replied the young lady, in alarm. "Yes," said the doctor; "if your servant is not quick it will be useless." "Oh, doctor, shall I die?" gasped the patient. "There is no danger of that," said the doctor, "if you can get well before John returns."

Insanity in Ireland. Insanity is increasing in Ireland. English statisticians say that one serious cause of lunacy is the abuse of tea, another an indulgence in alcohol, a third the disappointment of having tried emigration and failed.
